HITZ REPORTED SLATED TO GET APPEALS SEAT

District Supreme Court Justice Bailey Also Urged for Place.

JUDGESHIPS CREATED RECENTLY UNFILLED

Other Honor May Go to W. W. Millan, Levi David, Smith or Glassie.

LASKEY MAY SUCCEED HITZ, IF PROMOTED

Law Circles Hear Possible Vacancy Is Assured to Former Prosecutor.

Associate Justice William D. Hitz, of the District Supreme Court, may be promoted to associate justice of the District Court of Appeals, it was reported yesterday.

It also is reported that friends are trying to get the promotion for Associate Justice Jennings Bailey, who, like Justice Hitz, is a member of the Supreme Court.

For the other vacancy in the Court of Appeals, a number of attorneys are being mentioned, including W. W. Millan, Levi David, John Lewis Smith, and Henry H. Glassie.

Named by Coolidge.

Mr. Glassie was nominated by former President Coolidge for a place on the Supreme Court, but the nomination, together with many others, died when the Seventieth Congress adjourned.

Bills recently passed by Congress provided two associate judgeships for both the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals.

On Monday President Hoover named two men for the Supreme Court, Oscar R. Leuhring and Joseph W. Cox, and the nominations now are before the Senate judiciary committee. So far, however, there have been no nominations for the vacancies in the Court of Appeals.

Laskey May Get Place.

If Justice Hitz should be elevated to the higher court, it follows that there would be a vacancy in the Supreme Court. Reports have it that this post would go to John E. Laskey, former United States attorney here.

Mr. Laskey, it is said, would have been nominated for the Supreme Court but for the antagonism of two Southern senators who became angry with him at the time he was serving as a special prosecutor in the McPherson case.

Mayflower Model For Museum Here

Admiral Pratt Orders Tiny Ship From Plymouth, Pilgrims' Port.

London, June 26 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Admiral William V. Pratt has ordered a model of the Mayflower from S. J. Lethbridge, of Plymouth, England, which he intends presenting to a museum in Washington, it was learned today.

The model is now nearing completion only a few hundred yards from the place whence the Pilgrim Fathers set sail for America in the original Mayflower.

Lethbridge, in an interview, said the model will be an exact copy of the Mayflower as he had consulted old books and documents to ensure the accuracy of every detail. It is being made of teak taken from an old British warship, the Ganges, built in 1821.

Matrimonial Hint Denied by Smoot

Senator, on Vacation, Says He Will Gladly Admit Rumors When True.

Despite persistent rumors that Senator Smoot Reed, of Utah, was on his way to Salt Lake City to be married, the senator emphatically denied the report in Chicago yesterday, according to the Associated Press.

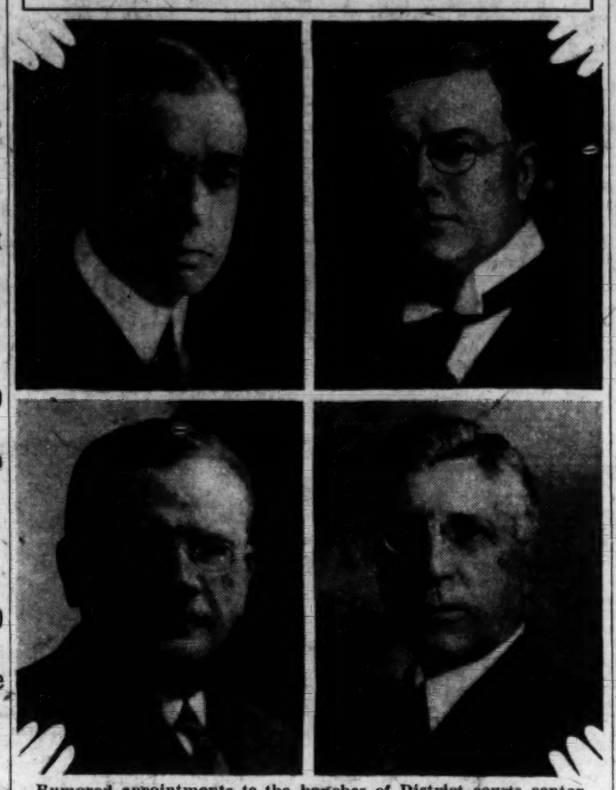
"I haven's asked any woman to marry me," he said. "When I am contemplating matrimony, I shall be only too glad to tell the world."

Senator Smoot left Washington Tuesday night for a vacation after arduous work on the tariff bill. Rumors in the Capital were that he was to marry early next week and go to Honolulu for a honeymoon.

Flour Thief to Serve 45 Days.

Arthur Harvey, Negro, was given 45 days in jail by Judge John P. McMahon in Police Court yesterday following conviction on a charge of petty larceny in connection with the theft of six bags of flour from the Sanitary Grocery Store at 4807 Georgia avenue northwest. The man was arrested by Policeman T. C. Bragg, of the Thirteenth Precinct.

POSSIBILITIES FOR BENCH POSTS



Rumored appointments to the benches of District courts center around these four figures, with several others. They are Supreme Court Justice Jennings Bailey (upper left) and Henry H. Glassie, prominent attorney (lower left), both mentioned for the Court of Appeals; Supreme Court Justice William D. Hitz (upper right), who may be named to the Court of Appeals, and former U. S. Attorney John E. Laskey (lower right), who is suggested for the Supreme Court if a present justice is elevated.

BALTIMORE 'DEPUTY' HELD ON RUM COUNT

Capital Police Accuse Pair of Transporting 143 Half Gallons.

SHERIFF BADGE SHOWN

A man claiming to be a deputy sheriff of Baltimore County, and his companion, were arrested yesterday by Sergt. George Little and his liquor squad on the outskirts of the city. The pair was charged with transportation and possession of 143 half-gallons of liquor. An additional charge of carrying concealed weapons was placed against the man who said he was a deputy sheriff, Edward A. Hamilton, 36 years old, of Baltimore.

When the liquor squad stopped the car in which the two men were riding, Sergt. Little asked to see the man's permit. Instead, the man showed him a sheriff's badge, saying he was on the Baltimore County force. Asked to open the locked rear compartment of the small car, the man said he did not have the keys.

Sergt. Little said he had observed the car making trips for several days, and as the auto passed them yesterday they smelt liquor. He followed the machine a short distance before stopping it. The car was equipped with special springs, and the floor of the liquor compartment was lowered to provide a larger space, Sergt. Little said.

The men were booked at the Sixth Precinct Station, where a blackjack was found in Hamilton's possession. This was the basis of the weapons charge. Hamilton's companion, Richard Lusby, 21 years old, also of Baltimore, was charged only with possession and transportation.

After booking the pair, Sergt. Little obtained a warrant and searched the car, finding the contraband. At the station, Hamilton gave his occupation as a chauffeur.

VIRGINIA APPLE BAN ISSUED BY ENGLAND

Other States Also Hit by New Order in Council Barring Grades to Nov. 15.

TARIFF REPRISAL SEEN

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., June 26.—Commercial apple growers of the Blue Ridge District, including Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and southeastern Pennsylvania, were dismayed today on receipt of word of an order in council of the United Kingdom prohibiting the importation of certain grades of American apples from July 7 to November 15. A telegram from R. G. Phillips, of Rochester, N. Y., secretary of the International Apple Shippers Association, said their officers and agents had been unable to ascertain the reason for the order.

Some of the resident agents here of English firms were asked to seek modifications, but declined to make unsolicited suggestions to home offices.

Leading growers here expressed the opinion that the order in council was a reprisal against the new American tariff measure, it was said. However, British dealers had objected to green and otherwise immature fruit being shipped to English markets from Virginia and other Eastern States. Local growers replied by saying green fruit only had been sent early in response to a foreign demand, and no effort had been made to unload unripe fruit abroad.

Grades affected by the order are "early export," "U. S. Commercial No. 1," "classified" and "No. 2." Growers declared such fruit always had been exposed at English auction houses and sold on its merits. The order permits importation only of "U. S. No. 1" and "fancy" in barrels and "fancy" and "extra fancy" in boxes. These, however, do not become highly colored or otherwise matured until after the peak of the ex-

PENSIONS PLAN PASSED; HOUSE UPHOLDS VETO

Vote to Sustain Hoover Is 188-182; Legion Project Upset.

VETERANS TO BE PAID $12 TO $40 MONTHLY

Cost of System Figured at $50,000,000 in First Year.

SENATE TAKES STEPS TOWARD RATE BOOSTS

Changes in New Measure Certain Before It Will Go to President.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

The country seemed fairly embarked upon a World War veterans' pension system yesterday as the price for getting the House Republicans out of a political hole.

When the House adjourned for the day it had voted, 188 to 182, to sustain the President's veto of the bill which he had previously denounced, and had passed in its place, 365 to 4, a bill providing for monthly pensions ranging from $12 to $40 per month for veterans who have become disabled since the war, or those who become disabled in the future, the recognizable disabilities to range from 25 to 100 per cent.

And in this frenzied effort to get out of its dilemma, it virtually dropped the original American Legion program which sought to provide for 27,000 so-called marginal cases which the President himself has said were worthy. They are, in other words, cases of ailing veterans who do not come under the present law, but about whom there is a serious doubt as to whether their disability was not really due to war service.

They are the crowd that this year's quota of veterans' legislation was originally designed to help.

Provision by Johnson.

A provision was stuck in the pension bill by Representative Johnson, of South Dakota, however, designed to ease their situation. It provides that the Veterans' Bureau may take lay testimony in their cases in determining whether they should not come under existing law.

The pension system's cost for the first year was estimated by Mr. Johnson at $50,000,000; at the end of three years $80,000,000 a year. In truth, no one knows how much it will cost. Mr. Johnson told the House that 200,000 veterans would be affected the first year.

Senate Boost Expected.

Mr. Hoover in his statement explaining his veto of the other bill said Director Hines, of the Veterans' Bureau, estimated "there are somewhere in the neighborhood of 380,-

LIGHTNING HITS EXPLOSIVE; 31 BELIEVED DEAD

Bolt Touches Off Blast, Blowing Drill Boat Into Bits.

WRECK SCATTERED ALONG ST. LAWRENCE

WOMAN SEES VESSEL SPLINTER TO PIECES

United States Coast Guard Ship Rescues 11 of Crew of 42.

Brockville, Ontario, June 26 (A.P.).—A roaring explosion caused by a flash of lightning tonight was believed to have snuffed out the lives of most of the crew of 42 of a drill boat engaged in dredging and blasting in the St. Lawrence River near here.

Eleven men were rescued, the other 31 were missing and were feared to be dead.

The disaster, the most serious in the history of this district, occurred so suddenly and with so little attendant excitement that occupants of summer cottages nearby knew nothing about it for some time. They believed the tremendous roar was merely another blast designed to remove shoals from the river bottom in Brockville narrows.

Blown to Bits by Blast.

The vessel, named the J. B. King, was said to have been blown to bits by the blast. Most of the missing men were part of the night shift, asleep in bunks below the water line when the lightning struck. There was little hope that more than one or two of them survived.

The eleven rescued were picked up by a U. S. Coast Guard boat and brought to hospitals here, where their injuries were said not to be serious.

A search for bodies was started. The drill boat was one of the largest in Canada.

Mrs. W. C. Walklate, who witnessed the accident from the veranda of her summer cottage about a quarter of a mile away, said she heard an explosion after a flash of lightning, saw a cloud of smoke arise from the spot where the drill boat had been at work and could then see only a few pieces of wreckage floating where the vessel, valued at $100,000, had been stationed.

Tells of Death Escape.

The boat was employed by the contracting firm of J. P. Porter & Sons, of St. Catherines, in deepening and widening the Brockville narrows under a contract issued by the department of public works.

One of the night shift, G. L. Brown, of Ottawa, who was rescued, told of

U.S. AND ARMS POOL LINKED AT LONDON

Jahncke Refuse to Yield Contents of Secret Pact Project.

RAPPED BY TREATY FOES

By ALBERT W. FOX.

The secret documents issued between Secretary Stimson and the Senate foreign relations committee was rendered more than ever acute yesterday when it developed that files of the Navy Department contain a confidential memorandum dealing with a "League of Nations Army and Navy" which Assistant Secretary of the Navy Jahncke declared was under discussion at the London Naval Conference.

News of existence of this secret document came as a surprise feature of hearings which the House naval affairs committee held yesterday on the plan to modernize battleships, which plan is in line with the London Treaty.

Secretary of the Navy Adams was on the stand when Representative James V. McClintic, of Oklahoma, asked about the secret document. The lid has been clamped down tight on all confidential matters of this character since the State Department flatly refused to permit the Senate to go behind the scenes and examine confidential exchanges having to do with Prime Minister MacDonald's visit last year or with negotiations at London.

But Mr. McClintic had written to Mr. Jahncke about the secret document last February while the London

GRAVELY DEMOTED TO PRIVATE RANK

Police Liquor Raider, Who Figured in Shooting, Back in Blue.

GOES TO NEW STATION

Spottswood F. Gravely, "liquor man" of the Third Police Precinct Station, yesterday was demoted and sent back to pound the pavements in uniform.

Gravely was transferred from the Third to the Second Precinct Station, and it was reported that Capt. William G. Stott, commander of the Third Precinct Station, is expected to recommend Private F. O. Brass, of his command, to take over the job of liquor law enforcement formerly held by Gravely. Capt. Stott's recommendation is expected to be approved by Maj. Henry G. Pratt, superintendent of police, whose policy as police chief is constantly to increase the responsibility of the precinct and bureau commanders, accept their recommendations, and hold them responsible for their territories.

Gravely has achieved wide notoriety as a liquor enforcement officer while stationed in the Third Precinct Station. He once came into public notice when his informer who "purchased" liquor on which search warrants were based was accused of perjury by the district attorney's office.

Recently Private Gravely figured in the shooting of James Crotts on March 19. Crotts was shot while fleeing from what he believed was a holdup, while Gravely, said to have fired the shots, declared he and other po-

Letter Citing Cannon May Open Kable Quiz

Message from New York Politician to U. S. District Attorney, Intimating Bishop's "Influence" in Bucket Shop Case, Held by Committee.

New York, June 26.—A dispatch from the Washington Bureau of the World says:

Another possibility that the lid may be lifted to disclose the back stage maneuvering in the case of Kable & Co.—the New York bucket shop through which Bishop James Cannon, jr., speculated—appeared on the horizon today when it was learned that members of the Senate judiciary committee are considering an inquiry into the handling of this case in the office of United States District Attorney Charles H. Tuttle, of New York.

While members of the judiciary committee have not reached a definite decision as to whether they will press for an investigation, some of them have been collecting information and evidence which, they feel, may be of value if such an investigation is undertaken.

Among the documents in the possession of committee members are letters exchanged in October, 1929, between Mr. Tuttle and a prominent New York politican and business man whose name is withheld for the present. This exchange took place just a few days before H. L. Goldhurst, active head of Kable & Co., entered an unexpected plea of guilty to a charge of using the mails to defraud and was sentenced to five years in Atlanta. Almost simultaneously with Mr. Goldhurst's plea Bishop Cannon sailed abroad.

In one of the letters to Mr. Tuttle the district attorney is asked if Bishop Cannon had used influence to have the Goldhurst case pigeon-holed, an insinuation which Mr. Tuttle denied in his response.

The letter to Mr. Tuttle, dated October 2, 1929, reads:

"There is a case pending in your office and has been for the past fifteen or sixteen months against a stock gambler by the name of Harry Goldhurst. Nothing has been done to try this case by your office, and it lay dormant and hidden in your files until I went to Chief Judge Manton, of the Circuit Court of Appeals, on June 17, 1929, and got his permission to have the ledgers photostated. Since then it seems that you have had time to try other stock gamblers, even arrest them and have them indicted within a few weeks; but you don't seem to have the time to try Harry Goldhurst.

"If this was the case of a Tammany district attorney, why, all the Republican politicians would be on the housetops proclaiming that Tammany was corrupt, that Tammany was rotten, that Tammany was delaying justice and pigeonholing indictments.

"I am in receipt of a communication from Washington. It runs as follows:

"'I have learned today, in the most positive and direct way, that the young woman who had charge of Goldhurst's case in the office of the district attorney was formerly a student at Blackstone College, Bishop

One Dead, Four Prostrated As Mercury Continues Up

Official Thermometer Reading of 97 Degrees Drives Throngs to Seek Relief in Open Air, While Many Move Bedding to Parks.

Driven from homes and apartments by heat and humidity which caused one death and four prostrations earlier in the day, thousands of Washington residents last night thronged parks and refrigerated theaters while the mercury hovered around the high 70's, accompanied by a humidity reading of 72 at 8 p. m.

In the early afternoon the temperature rose to a fraction above 97 to establish the year's record. Heavy clouds hung low over the city, but at a late hour eagerly awaited rain had not descended in quantities sufficient to break the heat wave which has gripped this city for four days.

In spite of predicted showers, park police expressed the belief that many persons would spend the night in Potomac Park, Hains Point and other parks, just as hundreds did Wednesday night.

The Pennsylvania avenue kiosk registered 97 at 4:30 p. m. The humidity reading at the same time stood at 45, one degree higher than Tuesday's record of 44.

George Stitts, 60, colored, of 1218 Twenty-third street northwest, dropped dead from heat exhaustion yesterday morning, while working on the Washington Railway & Electric Co.'s tracks at Eighteenth and U streets. The Rescue Squad worked for more than an hour over the man.

Intense as it is, the temperature is less to blame than the high humidity, the Weather Bureau explained.

The shade of park trees was at a premium yesterday, and dealers reported a strong demand for electric fans. Some offices closed almost an hour earlier than usual on account of the heat.

Capt. R. C. Montgomery, chief of park police, said that nearly 300 persons had brought bedding to Potomac

Noted Men Lent Lingle $85,000 After Stock Crash

Illinois Investigators Reveal Names on List, as Chicago's Acting Police Chief Shifts 934 of Force; Business Man Sought as Reporter's Slayer.

Chicago, June 26 (A.P.).—State's attorneys investigators said today they had uncovered evidence which indicated Alfred "Jake" Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, had borrowed $85,000 immediately after the stock market debacle last fall. High public officials and racketeers were among those named as having lent money to Lingle when the stock crash caught him unawares.

Among those named and the amounts reported lent, were Samuel A. Ettelson, corporation counsel, and Mayor Thompson's spokesman, $5,000; Maj. Carlos Ames, president of the civil service commission, $5,000; Alderman Bert Cronson, Ettelson's nephew and law partner of Clarence S. Darrow, noted criminal lawyer, $5,000, and an unnamed "high sanitary district official," $15,000.

The statement was given out almost simultaneously with the issuance by John H. Alcock, acting commissioner of police, of the most drastic "shake-up" order in recent years. Alcock ordered 934 men, including eleven lieutenants and 724 of the 900 men assigned to the detective bureau, transferred to district stations. At the same time he told each district captain he would hereafter be solely responsible for conditions in his district.

Other developments today were:

Search for Lingle's slayer was diverted from James "Red" Forsythe to an unidentified "young Loop business man" as the actual slayer of the reporter.

Uncovering of a check for $500 given by Lingle last September 13 to Police Capt. Daniel A. Gilbert, who was assigned to command the Loop district a month later.

Kingsford-Smith, Crew Land Southern Cross at Roosevelt Field.

POLICE LINES BREAK; SIR RONALD PUNCHED

San Francisco Flight to Mark End of Leader's Epochal Hops.

WOULD SELL PLANE, WED, SETTLE DOWN

"Dead Spot," and Not Compasses, Blamed for Ocean Distress.

New York, June 26 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The Southern Cross, that stanch Fokker monoplane which bridged the Pacific two years ago, ripped off the more than 1,000 miles from Harbor Grace, Nova Scotia, today to settle at Roosevelt Field and complete its flight across the Atlantic from Ireland.

It was uneventful, totally, this last leg of the Southern Cross' second ocean crossing, though there were hours of fog and hours of stiff head winds.

The four men of the Southern Cross, Maj. Charles E. Kingsford-Smith, the handsome young Australian who piloted her from California to Hawaii and Australia and thence westward to England; Capt. J. Patrick Saul, the navigator lent to Kingsford-Smith by the Irish Free State air force; Evert Van Dyk, a sharp-featured blond young Dutchman recruited from the Dutch East Indies flying service, and J. W. Stannage, a baldish South African radio operator, were neither physically nor nervously weary.

Reception Breaks Down.

Deafness bothered them a bit, from the long endured pound of the three ancient Wright whirlwind motors, but they were nimble and widely agrin when they clambered out of the big blue-bodied ship into the hands of the mob.

It was a reception that might have reduced lesser men to damp, frightened exhaustion, for the arrangements, made so carefully and so constantly revised all day, broke down utterly and shamefully.

It had been planned that after the United States health and customs inspectors had cleared them, the Nassau County reception committee, the New York City reception committee, and finally, Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador and his diplomatic party, should formally greet the fliers.

Sir Ronald Punched.

But instead the police lines failed to hold, the gentlmen of the reception committee got pushed about with no regard for their eminence, Sir Ronald was rudely poked in the stomach by an excited policeman, and the coat was nearly torn from the back of Henry Allen, the Australian high commissioner to the United States.

It was the worst hurly-burly that has ever occurred on a Long Island flying field, where there have been many notable shindigs between the police and the citizens.

The fliers, as a result, were nearly trampled under foot as they stepped into the noisily cordial crowd and it was fifteen minutes before the 175 Nassau County police under Chief Abraham Skidmore were brought into sufficient discipline to cease shoving members of the reception committee and get the ...lers to the operations ...office.

To Wed In September

There, at last, when the last politician's hand had been shaken and the last reception committeeman photographed in proud proximity to the fliers, the rapidly wilting Kingsford-Smith was permitted to receive a cablegram from his fiancee, Miss Mary

Powell, of Melbourne, to greet a couple of his oldest friends in this country, and to tell the story of his last great flight to the nawepapermen.

It was his last great flight, he stressed. When he sets the Southern Cross down at Oakland, Calif., he will have completed his aerial circumnavigation of the world which commenced two years and one month ago.

And when that is done he will marry in September and give himself to the more hum-drum but vastly more profitabltable business of directing a flying transport service in Australia.

Has Respect for Pacific.

"It was a tough job, and one we got out of thankfully," he said with a rueful shake of his head.

"The weather was mad, far worse than I had on the Pacific flight, and when we lost our bearings and had to fly about blindly for three hours it really seemed rather bad.

"Yet I would rather make the Atlantic flight again than to repeat the Pacific flight. The job of flying the Pacific is a frightfully delicate job of navigation. You're shooting at a fly speck when you set out for Hawaii and Suva, you know.

"But in flying the Atlantic you know you'll hit land if you keep flying west long enough.

"I'm disappointed, naturally, that we didn't make New York without a stop. If I were to try it again we could do a far better job, I'm sure. For one thing, we would have a different sort of compass arrangement.

Compasses Did Not Fail.

"Our compasses, I want to make plain, didn't fail use. We don't know for sure, yet, and it may take a good bit of scientific check-up to prove it, but apparently we ran into a sort of dead spot where the attraction of the magnetic pole was highly erratic and dangerously variable.

"The Bremen, which made the crossing two years ago, had the same trouble, you may recall."

He passed his hand over his wavy hair and looked up alertly for questions.

"To what do you attribute the success of this flight?" he was asked.

"Careful preparations, that's the main thing," he said.

Soon, he said, probably in two or three days, he and his men will fly off for California.

May Sell Southern Cross.

At present he is undecided as to whether he will make it a nonstop flight or not. He'd like to, he said, because he thought it had never been done by a trimotored shin.

"And what are you going to do with the Southern Cross?"

"Well," he said slowly, "I'd really like to sell her. I'm getting married and I'm frightfully hard up. She's still a good ship," he added with a grin at his salesmanship.

His reference to his impending marriage brought the inevitable questions from the frankly adoring young women reporters.

They wanted to know if his wife would make him stop flying.

"Oh, no, no, no," he laughed explosively. "I should say not. It's my business, you see."

"Fog, Fog," He Sighs.

"My fiancee knows that. Oh, no, she flies with me now and then. As a matter of fact, I think I'll teach her to fly. I'll probably be flying the rest of my life."

He returned briefly to a discussion of the difficulties of transatlantic flight.

"It was fog, fog, fog," he sighed. mind that and we dressed for it."

"And it was cold, though we didn't

Capt. Saul elaborated on these difficulties.

A bullet-headed, pleasant-spoken Irishman, who was for several years a ship's officer and is accounted one of the best navigators in the Irish Air Force, he told reporters that he had almost no chance to make observations to check his course.

Never Again, Says Stannage.

"I was only able to shoot the sun twice," he said, and gravely explained to one puzzled auditor that the phrase meant to take a sextant observation. "And in the night I go, only a couple of fleeting glances at the stars. It was very bad, and that compass trouble made it worse."

Van Dyk had nothing to say except that he'd had "plenty of flying just now," and that all he wanted was a bath. Tall and clean shaven, he had carefully combed his hair sleek before posing for the cameramen.

Stannage, the radio man, whose descriptions while the Southern Cross was in flight were so cheery and vivid, contented himself with declaring, "Never again, this was enough."

They agreed that the flight down from Harbor Grace, which commenced at 3:05 E. S. T.) this morning and ended fifteen and a half hours later after the plane had circled over New York, was "just a joy ride."

Crowd Not Large.

They were so obviously happy to reach their destination that they didn't let the bungled reception daunt them.

But under the circumstances their composure was remarkable, and their only manifest feeling was one of surprise that conditions should have been so.

And it was surprising, too, for the crowd was not large, probably not much above 2,500 persons, and a stout steel fence surrounded the field and Chief Skidmore had 150 foot police and 16 motorcycle men at hand.

But somehow or other a horde of boys and young men were admitted to the field by the police who so assiduously barred many of the reception committee and reporters and friends of the fliers, and these charged down the field when the Southern Cross, swinging in from the south with fifteen escorting planes buzzing about her, swooped twice about the field and settled dustily on the turf.

Whalen Pushes Through.

They ran along under the wide silver wings while Capt. Kingsford-Smith taxied up to the starting line, and engulfed him when he dropped down to ground from the pilot's cabin.

Instantly the plans conceived by William Enequist, head of the Nassau County committee, plans which contemplated putting Sir Ronald Lindsey, British Ambassador, and the accompanying plenipotentiaries last on the list of greeters, dissolved into shouting disorder.

It was 5 minutes before Grover Whalen, chairman of Mayor Walker's reception committee, could get through to shake hands with the fliers, and the agents of the Vacuum Oil Co., who underwrote the expenses of the venture, never did get through.

Trip From Harbor Grace.

Finally, an hour after the flight had ended, and 30 minutes behind schedule, the fliers were started off by motor caravan to New York, a bath and supper.

The four aviators were in high spirits as they winged down toward New York from Harbor Grace. The flying conditions were excellent, with just a few patches of fog here and there to keep this 1,100 mile last lap of their voyage from Ireland from seeming too much like child's play after the hazards of a westward crossing of the Atlantic.

A little before 8 o'clock (Eastern standard time), this morning, about five hours after the plane's take-off from Harbor Grace, the wireless operator, Mr. Stannage, radioed blithly that he was taking time off "to get a snack." He left his transmitter running and his key closed, however, so that signals from the plane continued.

Signal Cheerio Over Lynn.

A few hours later, with the ship cruising down over Halifax County, Nova Scotia, Mr. Stannage interrupted the most serious communications by which the plane was keeping its course to inform the world he and his companions were not too absorbed with their task to enjoy themselves.

"Beautiful country we're flying over," his message said. "Lovely lakes and dense forests."

On down they came, swinging into the west to pass over Cape Anne. As the plane passed over Gloucester there came another gay message. "Dead course for Lynn, over which we will circle once to say cheerio, Balchen and Melville."

And that made it an even bigger day for Lynn, which already had gone pretty much carnival in celebration of the homecoming of Capt. Frederick C. Melville, mariner of the 2nd expedition. Melville, a native of Lynn, had as his guest there today Bernt Balchen. The crew of the Southern Cross had kept itself informed.

Greeted by Boston.

A few minutes later, following the coastline down, it was over Boston. At 3:40 (E. S. T.), a bevy of escort planes met it just above the Hub and flew down with it, while the tugs, steamers and ferries in Boston Harbor let out a throaty welcome. Less than two hours and a half later it was over New York.

Maj. Kingsford-Smith and his three comrades got to the airport in Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, a few minutes after 2:30 (E. S. T.), this morning, carrying with them an ample lunch, and got immediately into their plane. The motors were tuned up, the plane taxied 100 wards down the field and then took to the air at 3:05 a. m., twenty hours after landing on its flight from Ireland.

The course down lay over Cabot Strait, Cape Breton Island and Nova Scotia, and then by a slight deviation to the north, over southern Maine and then on down the New England coast.

Man Severely Hurt by Baseball.

Joe Bemma, 26 years old, of 204 First street southwest, received severe head injuries early last night when he was struck in the right temple by a baseball while playing in a game on a lot near his home. He was removed to Emergency Hospital, where his condition was reported as undetermined.

Commission Charged With Evading Inquiry Into Dry Enforcement.

REDUCED FUND SOUGHT

Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, outstanding dry, yesterday charged the Wickersham Law Enforcement Commission with evading the responsibility involved in its investigation of prohibition enforcement by deliberately wasting time and money collecting information on other laws, many of which were outside the jurisdiction of the Federal Government.

The Virginia senator, who announced that he was a prohibitionist, "both in principle and practice," flayed the commission unsparingly as he urged the Senate to adopt the provision in the second deficiency bill reducing the commission's appropriation from $250,000 to $50,000 and that the amount, including the commission unexpended balance of $88,000, be used solely for the inquiry into prohibition enforcement. Senate action on the appropriation was deferred until today at the request of Chairman Jones (Republican), of Washington, who said other senators wanted to be heard.

Senator Jones (father of the "five-and-ten" law and a prohibitionist in principle and practice like Senator Glass) has an amendment to restore the $250,000, contending that the commission's work will be nullified with the adoption of the reduction approved by the finance committee at the instance of Senator Glass.

The attack on the commission after Senator Jones had called up his amendment and explained its importance to the completion of commission's study of lawlessness in the United States, presented the unusual spectacle of two of the Senate's most active drys at odds over methods of the Volstead act.

U.S. STANDS TO LOSE ON 1929 WHEAT CROP

Stabilization Output Not to Compete With 1930 Supply, Says Milnor.

BEEF PRICE CUT URGED

(Associated Press.)

In a couple of statements fraught with high-charged possibilities the Farm Board laid a heavy hand yesterday on the long precarious wheat and live stock markets.

C. B. Denman, board member representing live stock, said in effect that the retail price of beef should be reduced immediately wherever it already had not been brought in line with the sharp slump in wholesale beef and cattle prices; and George S. Milnor, president and general manager of the Grain Stabilization Corporation, was authorized to announce that 1929 wheat held by the corporation would not be put on the market in competition with the 1930 crop.

The latter statement admittedly was capable of the interpretation that the Government may be called upon to stand the loss on from 50,000,000 to 75,000,000 bushels of wheat taken out of the 1929 crop.

Exact figures on the amount were not given, but Mr. Milnor said his organization had withdrawn from the market approximately three times the amount of the 1929 increase in the visible supply. Private trade estimates have placed the increase at from 17,000,000 to 20,000,000 bushels, but the Department of Agriculture estimates it at about 25,000,000 bushels.

Mr. Milnor listed one hope that the stabilization corporation may be able to dispose of its holdings. If prices rise to the level at which the wheat was purchased the corporation will renew market operations, he said.

Farm circles recalled, however, that most of the "stabilization wheat" was purchased at from $1.12 to $1.25 on the loan value basis established by the Farm Board when cash wheat was selling near the $1 mark. Wheat had recovered today but 2 cents a bushel from the lowest levels since 1914, when July contracts were filled at 77½ cents a bushel.

Even if wheat rose to the loan values and the corporation started to sell, it still would suffer a heavy loss in storage charges.

It was said at the board that Mr. Milnor's statement was issued primarily to bolster up a sagging market caused by lack of export, the influx of the new winter wheat crop and the trade's timid operations in the absence of definite assurance that stabilization wheat would not be thrown on the market until the new crop is out of the way.

Mr. Denman's statement, it was said, was issued in the belief that lower retail prices would stimulate beef consumption, eliminate the temporary surplus of dressed meat and bring about more stable prices for livestock.

RAIL BROTHERHOOD BANK CLOSES DOORS

Cincinnati Institution Is Hurt by $1,000,000 Plunge of A. W. Shafer.

RUN BRINGS CLIMAX

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 26 (A.P.).—One of the country's largest labor banks, the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks National Bank, closed today as a direct result of the $1,000,000 alleged check-kiting operations of A. W. Shafer, whose peculations also forced the Cosmopolitan Bank & Trust Co. to close sixteen days ago.

Fifty-one per cent of the Brotherhood Bank's stock was owned by 122,000 United States and Canadian members of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers and Station Employes.

The Brotherhood Bank board of directors voluntarily closed the institution after depositors withdrew $1,000,000 in the last three days. The run followed the resignation of three high bank officials last Monday.

Two of these former officials, Lyman E. Norris, vice president, and Harry Rosenblum, cashier, were arrested on warrants sworn by United States District Attorney Haveth E. Mau, which charged conspiracy to violate the national banking act. They pleaded not guilty and were held under $25,000 bond each.

Federal and county officials expressed belief that the bank would probably fully meet every obligation.

A slight run existed at the bank since June 10, the date the Cosmopolitan closed on disclosure that Shafer, former manager of the H. L. Doherty Co., was short $623,000 in his account with the bank.

Mau said Shafer had deposited collateral bearing forged indorsements with the Brotherhood Bank. The exact amount was not disclosed, but was reported to run from $225,000 to $375,000.

The Brotherhood Bank had deposits of $4,800,000, total resources of $5,659,363, capital stock of $400,000, surplus of $100,000, and undivided profits of $65,958.

Man Found Guilty In Slaying Wife

Verdict of Second-Degree Murder Returned by District Jury.

After deliberating for several hours over the fate of Zacheus White, Negro, charged with the first degree murder of his wife, a jury in District Supreme Court last night found a verdict of second degree murder.

White is alleged to have killed his wife, Alice, last July 14 at a house on Twenty-fourth street northeast near E street. The Negro pleaded self-defense, contending that another Negro, Edward Hall, whom he had found at his home, had assaulted him.

Hall was killed in the melee as well as the colored woman while Edwards Chambers, another Negro, was wounded. White pleaded that his wife was shot accidentally. Attorneys James O. O'Shea and John H. Burnett appeared for White while the Government was represented by Assistant United States Attorney James F. Hughes.

Five in Each 100 Americans Aiding Gangs, Writer Says

Widespread Burden of Crime Laid to Prohibition and Alliance of Racketeers and Politicians at Industrial Democracy Conference.

Forest Park, Pa., June 26 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A newspaperman's inside story of rackets, in which he said 5 per cent of the Nation's population is engaged, today opened the four-day conference of the League for Industrial Democracy on "The Folly of Work, or Racketeering High and Low." The conference is being held at Camp Tamiment.

The newspaperman is Edward D. Sullivan, author of "Rattling the Cup on Chicago Crime." He ranked bootlegging as the most important among some 200 "rackets" and attributed the power of gangsterism principally to prohibition. Gangsters have formed an alliance with politicians, he said, and the days when five men could be sent to the chair for the murder of one gambler, as happened in the famous Rosenthal-Becker case in 1912, are gone forever, he edclared.

He compared that murder with the Rothstein slaying, in which on conviction has been obtained. In Chicago, he said, there have been more than 4,000 murders within the last ten years and only 84 executions.

"Authorities on crime and law enforcement," he said, "are agreed that above 8 per cent of teh population of the United States today either is active in or associated with the vicious government within a government now exploiting the country. Dr. James M. Doran, prohibition administrator, has admitted that the booze racket alone —of the more than 200 rackets now in operation on a country-wide basis —paid bootleggers in excess of $3,000,000,000, last year."

"One of the most menacing factors in the corruption of police," he continued, "is that there is a general feeling — a sincere feeling — among gangsters and police alike that 'nobody wants prohibition.'

"Gangsters invariably refer to an honest policeman as a 'wrong cop.' They insist that 'wrong cops' are rare and they have no respect for them whatever. They merely regard them as inordinately stupid, particularly if the bribe refused is merely to forget some bootlegging matter."

The modern gangster is "quicker to kill than ever before in criminal history," particularly in vengeance, said Sullivan. He traced six murders to a feud growing out of the mission of Eugene Moran and Frank Devlin, who went to Denver to kill Eddie Diamond, a gangster who had made an enemy of Arnold Rothstein.

HOOVER, AT STATUE, PRAISES BUCHANAN

Career Is Declared Rich in Achievement, Deserving Nation's Praise.

NOTABLES AT UNVEILING

Before a distinguished group of Government officials, diplomats and Pennsylvanians gathered in Meridian Hill Park yesterday, President Hoover dedicated Sculptor Hans Schuler's bronze statue of President James Buchanan, "an incorruptible statesman and a faithful public servant."

The President reviewed Mr. Buchanan's lengthy public service and the problems of his administration, saying that the fifteenth President was "the last outstanding figure surviving of one of the most remarkable groups of men in our history. His career was rich in achievements, deserving the gratitude of his country."

The statue was officially presented to the Nation by Roland S. Morris, former Ambassador to Japan, who represented Gov. John S. Fisher and the State of Pennsylvania. Senor Pietro Gladiatore Gentile, vocalist of the Los Angeles Post of the American Legion, sang "The Star-Spangled Banner," and a detachment from the Headquarters Company, U. S. A., presented arms while the bachelor chief executive's cousin, Mrs. Francis H. Denny, unveiled the memorial.

Pigeons Are Let Loose.

As the veil fell from the bronze figure, a dozen carrier pigeons, released from the pavilion, circled above the flower-bedecked base.

Declaring that President Buchanan had faced "unexpected and bewildering difficulties," Mr. Morris said that the failure of his administration merely emphasized the justice of his mediation policy. "There were years when few dared to speak well of Buchanan," he continued, "but as the heat of passion died, his qualities as a statesman became apparent, and we now recognize him as one of our truly great men.

"His chief objective was the preservation of the Union by peaceful means, but he was opposed by people incapable of being conciliated, and the frustration of his plans in no way reflects upon his principles or his ability. Throughout his long and distinguished public life he held that calm reasoning and mediation were the chief requisites for statesmanship."

Niece Defrayed Cost.

The program was opened at 2:30 o'clock, by Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, director of public buildings and parks. After the invocation had been pronounced by the Rev. Godfrey Chobot Lawrason Riggs, trustee of the Buchanan Memorial Fund, and chairman of the dedication ceremony, explained that the monument had been largely financed by the late Mrs. Harriett Lane Johnston, a niece of President Buchanan, who bequeathed $100,000 for the purpose.

Mr. Riggs introduced the sculptor, Hans Schuler, and the architect, William Gordon Beecher, who were applauded by the gathering. Led by Senor Gentile, and accompanied by the Marine Band, the assemblage sang "America," and Bishop William F. McDowell of the Methodist Episcopal Church gave the benediction. The program closed with "Taps."

The ceremony was broadcast over the National system, and the addresses were carried to the several hundred in attendance through amplifiers installed by the U. S. Signal Corps.

President Hoover and guests of honor sat in a temporary pavilion facing the monument, which is on the Fifteenth street side of the park. Music before and after the services was furnished by the Newsie Cadet Band of Lancaster, Pa., President Buchanan's home town.

The President's address follows:

Address of President.

"My Fellow Countrymen:

"It is my pleasant duty today to take part in the formal dedication of this statue of the fifteenth President of the United States. These memorials of the past not only pay honor to the virtues of the men who have held the highest office which our citizens can bestow, but they also help to fix in our minds the orderly march of our life as a nation.

"James Buchanan, whom we honor here today, occupied the Presidency at a moment when no human power could have stayed the inexorable advance of a great national conflict. The black clouds of dissension had gathered over the country when he entered upon his duties. The thunderbolts of war were withheld until he left the scene, but throughout his administration the sky was clouded with the ominous threatenings of storm.

"He had shared in the notable efforts to solve the problem of slavery by compromise. His partners in these efforts were the ablest and most penetrating minds of his day, and it was largely by chance that his Presidency coincided with the ultimate failure of these hopes. He was the last outstanding figure surviving of one of the most remarkable groups of men in our history, and it was his fate to represent them at the moment when they must yield to younger men representing a more aggressive conception of the Nation's duty. He played his part with a dignity and courage that only now are receiving the recognition they deserve.

Eminent As Diplomat.

"Mr. Buchanan served his country during a long and active life—as a senator of prominence and as a diplomat. His first great diplomatic success was in negotiating our first commercial treaty with Russia. He performed important services as Ambassador to London. As Secretary of State under President Polk, he skillfully guided our position with respect to the Oregon boundary and settled this delicate question advantageously and peacefully. Both as negotiator while ambassador and as director of policies while Secretary of State, Mr. Buchanan established for himself one of the most eminent reputations in these fields in all our history.

"His career was rich in achievements deserving the gratitude of his country. But its most appealing side should also be mentioned here. A bachelor, and engrossed in public and private business, he found time to rear and educate an orphaned niece in a manner that would have done credit to any father. His wise and affectionate letters to Harriet Lane are a charming addition to American literature, and are still to be read with pleasure. It is due to Miss Lane's devoted appreciation of his kindness that this statue has been erected, for she left provision for it in her will. This is, therefore, an occasion not only honoring a great patriot but also testifying to a real filial affection.

"I now dedicate the statue of James Buchanan, fifteenth President of the United States, to the people of this country, for a memorial of his services as a man and as a chief officer of government."

COMMITTEE HEARS U.S. VIEW ON LOANS

Cotton Says Country Has to Permit Flotations by Certain Powers.

GERMAN BOND BAN IS HIT

The matter of controlling foreign loans is a very difficult one for the State Department, but so long as the United States engages in trade with other nations it is virtually obliged to permit flotation of such loans in this country.

This view was expressed before the House committee on banking and currency yesterday by Joseph P. Cotton, Undersecretary of State. Mr. Cotton was invited by Chairman McFadden to appear and discuss a pending resolution prohibiting national banks, Federal Reserve banks and member banks of the Federal Reserve System from purchasing German reparation bonds.

Mr. Cotton declared that the United States at present is in no way intermingled with the European reparations settlement, but warned the committee it might be involved if Congress should pass the McFadden resolution.

Conference at White House.

He admitted that before the Bank of International Settlements was put into operation a conference was held at the White House, participated in by Secretary of State Stimson, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Secretary of Commerce Lamont, Undersecretary of the Treasury Mills and Gov. Young of the Federal Reserve Board, to discuss the attitude of the United States Government toward flotation of a part of the German reparation bonds in this country.

The only facts laid before the State Department, he continued, were contained in a letter from J. P. Morgan & Co., which inquired whether there was any objection to the loan flotation here.

"Mr. Cotton said the State Department replied either that it was "not interested" or "we do not care to interpose objections."

Alleged Unfairness Hit.

He insisted that the inference drawn by some persons that because the State Department did not object to flotation of German reparation bonds here it approved the set-up of the Bank of International Settlements was "quite unfair."

Objections to foreign loans by the State Department, he added, are imposed only where they violate treaty obligations, whre the country seeking the loan plans to use it in purchasing armaments or to finance foreign cartels to raise commodity prices, or where the country has not reached an agreement with the United States for the settlement of its war debts.

Mr. Cotton said the department did not go into the legal phases of the German reparation bonds, not being a law bureau.

Bliss and March To Get War Rank

Full General Rating Given to Officers Placed on Retired List.

The War Department announced yesterday that Maj. Gen. Tasker H. Bliss and Maj. Gen. Peyton C. March, both retired, will become full generals on the retired list under an act recently signed by President Hoover.

Both were full generals during the World War, and the measure just made law by the President's signature would give war-time rank to officers upon retirement. A total of 715 officers now on the retired list are affected.

The grade of lieutenant general on the retired list will be give nto Maj. Gen. Hunter Liggett and Robert L. Bullard, both retired.

U. S. JOBLESS TOTAL FIXED AT 2,000,000

Census Returns for First Quarter of Population Give 574,647.

CITY AVERAGES IN LEAD

(Associated Press.)

Census returns on unemployment announced yesterday fixed the total of jobless persons in an area inhabited by one-quarter of the country's total population at 574,647.

These figures, the first yet announced from the national survey undertaken in April as to the employment situation, indicated that the total number able to work but unable to find jobs would be in the neighborhood of 2,000,000, which, Secretary Lamont commented, is considerably less than the estimates generally current as to the probable number of unemployed in the Nation.

The average of unemployment in cities was indicated to be 3 per cent, slightly ahead of the national average. The absolute low of unemployment in a State was indicated in Arkansas, where but four-tenths of 1 per cent of the persons visited were so classed.

The high for a single state was Nevada, with 4.5 per cent of its population unemployed as far as counted.

Another high figure of unemployment came from a partial census of Chicago, where 4.3 per cent of workless people were found on a compilation of somewhat less than half of the city's total inhabitants.

Among the larger industrial States, Pennsylvania was listed as indicating 2 per cent unemployed; New York, 1.9 per cent; Massachusetts, 3 per cent; Michigan, 2.7 per cent, and Illinois, 1.6 per cent. Ohio had 3.3 per cent unemployed, while New Jersey, from which only three smaller cities reported a count, indicated 3.2 per cent of unemployed among its urban population.

California showed 2.5 per cent unemployed and Colorado, 2.6 per cent. It was estimated that the total of unemployed given represented the jobless portion of a population of 29,964,480, who were individually enumerated by the census agents.

This is the first time in a number of years that a national count of unemployment has been attempted.

Icelanders Are Lauded By Senator Shipstead

Tribute to Iceland was paid by Senator Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, in a radio talk last night over the Columbia Broadcasting System, in which he spoke briefly of this year as marking the 1,000th anniversary of the founding of the Althing, or Iceland Parliament.

"People who love human liberty owe a debt of gratitude to the little country of Iceland for having kept the vestal fires of democracy burning down through the centuries," he declared.

THREE FISHERMEN DROWN IN LAKE ERIE

60-Mile Wind-Rain Storm at Buffalo Plunges City Into Darkness.

HUGE DAMAGE REPORTED

Buffalo, N. Y., June 26 (A.P.).—Three men were drowned, two horses were struck by lightning and widespread damage was caused throughout Buffalo just after noon today during a storm which swept down upon the city in the teeth of a 60-mile wind.

Caught in the grip of the sudden storm, a tiny fishing boat raced in vain for the harbor breakwater near Lackawanna. Lifted high by the raging swells into which the gale lashed Lake Erie, the little vessel was hurled against the wall and capsized, its three occupants drowning. One body was recovered, but had not been identified.

Meanwhile, the city of Buffalo was plunged into the darkness of midnight. Wires were torn loose, trees and telephone poles crashed to the ground beneath the fury of the storm.

Then came rain, and the streets in some parts of the city ran with water level with the sidewalks. Street car service was demoralized, while automobiles took shelter in the nearest garages or parked by the curbs, as frightened occupants waited for the end of the storm.

The gale died out within a short time and the storm passed as swiftly as it came.

BLAST OF DYNAMITE BLOWS SHIP TO BITS

his narrow escape from death. He said there was no dynamite aboard the waterline with his comrades when the explosion shattered the vessel. He said that he dove through a window and managed to cling to wreckage until picked up.

R. A. McNeil, foreman of the day shift, also was rescued.

Luther Kuchenbecker, superintendent of the Porter firm, who was ashore at the time of the accident, said there was no dynamite aboard the craft. Previous reports were that there were twenty tons.

Believes Bolt Hit Wires.

Kuchenbecker said there was a possibility the lightning had struck wires connected with charges of dynamite that were already placed in position in a shoal that was being removed.

The survivors, clinging to bits of wreckage, were picked up by the United States Coast Guard cutter 211, which was proceeding downstream at the time of the blast.

They were: Joe Marohnick, William McNeil, St. Catharines, Ontario; Everett Snider, Brockville; G. L. Brown, Ottawa; Kuvna Polich, C. Sinerva, Joseph Belazion, Thoroid, Ontario; F. McNeill, M. Kanjer, Leo Marion, Ottawa, and George Kucon, Montreal.

Coast Guard headquarters here were informed last night that 30 lives had been lost this afternoon in an explosion when lightning struck the drill boat King, near Brockville, Ontario.

FIRST FRAY SINCE SPRING

Paris, June 26 (A.P.).—Premier Andre Tardieu's government won a victory today in its first fight with the opposition since the Easter recess, carrying a vote of confidence by 330 to 262.

The vote came about when Socialists made a strong attack on the government, accusing it of depleting the treasury. Vincent Auriol and Leon Blum, Socialist leaders, demanded an investigation of the treasury's condition by a special committee.

With that the premier moved a previous question and made the vote one of confidence.

The Socialists accused the government of "turning its back on the policy of Locarno and dreaming of nothing but the race for armaments," and charged in briskly when the 17,000,000,000 franc ($680,000,000) program of public improvements for five years was brought up.

They alleged that 5,000,000,000 francs, on which the government counted for its initial outlay, was not available without an issue of treasury bonds and said that the government had made unauthorized expenditures for national defense.

Premier Tardieu retorted with accusations that Socialists had tried to discredit France as well as the government by false reports of treasury leaks and plans for secret armaments. He emphatically denied the charges. Turning toward the Socialist benches, he cried:

"And you knew that was false."

Capital Girls Take Leading Roles in Convention of Chi Sigma.

With approximately 400 delegates present from Washington and twelve other cities, the twelfth annual convention of the Chi Sigma National Sorority opened in the Hotel Mayflower last night, with President Anne Knouse, of this city, presiding.

After hearing various committee reports, and a history of the sorority read by the national historian, Miss Evelyn Schneider, of Washington, the delegates adjourned until 5:30 this afternoon, when a tea dance at the Mayflower will be followed by a business meeting and election of officers.

The convention will be brought to a close tomorrow night with a formal dinner and ball at the Mayflower. Today and tomorrow out-of-town delegates will be entertained by Washington members at teas and swimming parties and on sightseeing tours.

THREE ASSISTANTS SELECTED BY ROVER

U. S. Attorney Appoints Two in Preparation for New Courts.

ONE SUCCEEDS LAMBERT

Due to the creation of two additional District Supreme Courts and the resignation of one assistant prosecutor, three young attorneys yesterday were named assistant United States attorneys, according to announcement by United States Attorney Leo A. Rover.

The new men are: Wilbert McInerney, Michael F. Keogh and Wilbur N. Baughman.

Mr. McInerney succeeds Assistant United States Attorney Arthur G. Lambert, who resigned recently to become a Special Assistant United States Attorney General in condemnation matters. Mr. Keogh and Mr. Baughman are the new men.

United States Attorney Rover stated that he planned to send all three of the men to Police Court to obtain training in court procedure and methods of prosecution. Mr. Baughman, he said, will be detailed to the liquor prosecution office under Assistant United States Attorneys David A. Hart and Julian I. Richards, while Mr. Keogh and Mr. McInerney will be assigned to duty in the other criminal branch under Assistant United States Attorneys Charles B. Murray and John R. Kitzpatrick. Mr. Rover stated that he hoped the new men would become sufficiently proficient during the summer months to warrant promotions to the District Supreme Court when the two new courts are ready to function.

Mr. Baughman, a native of Florida and a resident of Kensington, Md., has been connected for two years with the law firm of Cromelin & Laws. He is 25 years old and a law graduate of George Washington and Georgetown Universities.

Mr. Keogh, a native of Pennsylvania, is 27 years old. He has been connected with the United States attorney's office for the past four years. He is a graduate of the Georgetown law school and was admitted to the bar in 1927.

Mr. McInerney is 29 years of age and a native of Montana. He lives at 621 Gallatin street northwest. He was a page in the Senate for a number of years and is a graduate of Eastern High School, Notre Dame University and the Georgetown University law school. He also was admitted to practice in 1927 and since then has been engaged in private practice with offices in the Transportation Building.

Man Uses Gas, Gun To Commit Suicide

Self-Destruction Verdict of Coroner in Death of Disease Victim.

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday by the coroner in the case of Edward G. Quinland, 44 years old, of Albemarle street near Forty-fourth street northwest, who killed himself early yesterday morning. The man made death doubly certain, turning on the gas in a sealed room and shooting himself in the mouth.

The man had been suffering from a disease pronounced incurable. He left a note to his mother, asking her pardon and saying that he would be better off dead.

The body was found when the mother returned from a visit to friends with whom she had spent the night. The Fire Rescue Squad, called to render aid to Quinlan, treated Private R. M. Kirby, of the Fourteenth Precinct, who was ill from the effects of the gas suffered when he broke into the gas filled room to bring out Quinlan.

Park Wednesday night, and that hundreds of others had spent the night at Hains Point and in other parks.

The District park office yesterday authorized wading in Rock Creek, although swimming was prohibited, due to the impurity of the water.

Figures obtained at the Water Department yesterday indicated that Washington residents had consumed 91,900,000 gallons of water during the 24-hour period ended at 8 a. m. This total is expected to greatly increase during the 24-hour period ending this morning.

Heat prostrations recorded yesterday were: James Nolan, 68, 902 Eighth street northwest, overcome at Seventh and I streets northwest in mid-afternoon, condition not serious; Mrs. John Van Sweingen, 25, of Mifflinton, Pa., overcome while motoring through city, condition not serious; Amelia Anderson, 32, colored, of 140 Lawrence street northeast, overcome in front of 806 G street northwest, taken home after refusing medical treatment.

An unidentified colored man was prostrated at Sixth and G streets southwest in the morning, but recovered and left the scene before the Emergency Hospital ambulance arrived.

Today is expected to be fair, with southwest breezes bringing a slight drop in temperature.

VETERANS' BILL VETO SUSTAINED IN HOUSE

Pensions System Is Used to Get Republicans Out of Dilemma.

LEGION PROGRAM GONE

000 possible cases of disability incurred in civil life since the war amongst the 4,300,000 living veterans."

But no one expects the Senate to let the bill stand as the House passed it. It is already making plans, in fact, to make the rates conform to the Spanish War veterans' measure passed a few weeks ago, that is, by boosting the pension range from $20 to $60 per month and lowering the minimum disability to 10 per cent instead of 25 per cent as in the House bill.

Senators Walsh, of Massachusetts, and Connally, of Texas, have amendments already prepared to accomplish this. If the bill gets out of the Senate with only these changes it will be lucky and it is hard to see how the House can get out of accepting them.

Mr. Hoover vetoed the Spanish War veterans' bill but he was overridden overwhelmingly in both houses.

Attitude on New Bill.

The understanding is that he will accept the new House bill. As to whether that agreement applies to the boosts the Senate is sure to put in is not known. The understanding is that such a bill would be passed by the House over his veto, though.

Of the four members who voted against the new House bill, two, Representative Kvale, of Minnesota, and Milligan, of Missouri, are war veterans and real ones. Milligan's objection is understood to have been against the parsimony of the pensions, inasmuch as a pensions system was being put into effect.

There was jubilation among administration supporters at the strength mustered in sustaining the President's veto of the former bill. Not only was there the sufficient one-third of those present voting to sustain but there was even a majority.

Loud praises, too, were being sung for the manner in which Speaker Longworth saved the administration's face and brought order out of chaos.

Justification of Action.

The price that had to be paid, though, must have been as distasteful to him as it was to the President.

A number of members justified the pensions' plunge by the statement that the country would have had to come to it in the next two years or so and the jump might just as well be made now.

As to whether a tax increase will follow, of course, remains to be seen. There was a lot of talk about one in the event the other bill passed.

If $50,000,000 is a fair estimate of what the House bill will cost the first year, one may rest assured that the Senate bill and the one that will finally be enacted unless some unforeseen development occurs will cost much more. By the way, no veteran who pays income tax can get a pension under the terms of the bill. The Senate may knock that out, too.

PARLEY DISCUSSES U. S. AND ARMS POOL

conference was in session and Mr. Jahncke had made reply. This reply constituted the evidence that such document actually existed and word spread quickly to the Senate side of the chamber.

The letter from Mr. Jahncke, replying to Mr. McClintic's inquiry, is as follows:

"14 February, 1930.

"My dear Representative:

"With reference to your letter of 29 January, 1930, I find there is in the confidential files of the Navy Department a paper entitled 'Proposed Plans for Establishment of League of Nations Army and Navy.' There is nothing on record to show what action was taken on this paper, or what consideration was given to it, but it is perfectly evident that the paper was prepared as a confidential document, that it was never made public, and that it has been held as confidential until now.

"In view of the fact that this paper has been held confidential up to this time, and in view of the further fact that, as its subject indicates, it deals with matters some of which are now under discussion at the Naval Conference in London, I feel that it would not be consistent with the public interests to permit this paper to leave the department, or to make it public until the London conference is over.

"Yours very sincerely,

"ERNEST LEE JAHNCKE (sig.)
"Acting Secretary of the Navy."

Adams Ignorant of Plan.

Secretary Adams had no knowledge of any discussion of the league Army and Navy plan at London. But the flat statement from Mr. Jahncke that this matter was under discussion at the conference last February was instantly seized upon by Senators Hiram Johnson and Moses, who are leading the fight against the naval pact.

Mr. Johnson said:

"Of course the whole subject we have been dealing with smacks of the internationalism with which of late years we have become so familiar Find a League of Nations man, and there you have an enthusiast for the London Treaty. Talk to a League of Nations courter, and immediately you discover a hysterical London Treaty advocate. A League of Nations Army and Navy would have been quite an appropriate subject at London. Ofcourse it would be a 'confidential matter.'"

Senator Moses said:

"Mr. Jahncke, in his letter to Representative McClintic, was writing with the caution which should attend every new member of a new administration.

"Perhaps before the London Treaty is disposed of by the Senate and while the process of the foreign relations committee is still existent, Mr. Jahncke may find himself inclined to answer more specifically and in detail regarding the 'proposed plans for establishment of League of Nations Army and Navy,' a proposal which must seriously affect every citizen and every taxpayer in the United States."

It is indicated that the proposal whereby America would pool her military and naval forces with other powers to enforce dictates of the League of Nations covenant dates back to the administration of Woodrow Wilson and links with establishment of the league. But it has never been known that any such plan was on file in the Navy Department of the United States or was subject to serious consideration at any time or was, as Mr. Jahncke points out, a subject of confidential discussion at the naval conference at London.

Hoover's Message Vetoing Veterans Pension Measure

To the House of Representatives:

I am returning herewith House bill 10381, without approval.

One of the most repugnant tasks which can fall to this office is to disapprove of measures intended to benefit our sick or disabled men who have served our country in war. Perhaps as much as any other person, I have full realization of the task, the hardships and the dangers to which the Nation ordered its sons. In sentiment and in sympathy, I should desire no greater satisfaction than to support just measures which are proposed for their benefit. But I want a square deal between veterans—not unjust discriminations between special groups, and I do not want wasteful or unnecessary expenditures.

The country already generously provides for the 280,000 men whose health or earning-power is shown to have been impaired by their service in the war and for 91,000 dependents of the men who suffered or died. That is, and should be, a first charge upon the Nation.

Bill Radical Departure.

This measure, except for a small part, adds nothing to aid of veterans wounded or disabled in the war. It is a radical departure from our full committment to provide compensation to men for war disability into the field of pensions to men who have incurred disabilities as the incident of civil life since the war and having no valid relation to their military service. It provides that in respect to veterans, who between the years 1925 and 1930, shall have been afflicted with any one of an extensive category of diseases and thus disabled, there is established a presumption that these diseases originated from their service and that they should be compensated or pensioned upon the basis of men who suffered as a result of actual military service.

This provision would give war disability benefits to from 75,000 to 100,000 men who were not disabled as the result of war. In other words the bill purports to establish that men who have enjoyed good health for a minimum of seven years (from 1918 to 1925) since the war, or a maximum of 12 years (to 1930) and who have then become afflicted, have received such afflictions from their war service.

Presumption Seen False.

I am informed by the director of the Veterans' Bureau that the medical council of the bureau, consisting of most eminent physicians and surgeons, supported by the whole experience of the bureau, agree conclusively that this legal presumption that affliction from diseases mentioned in the bill between 1925 and 1930, is not a physical possibility and that the "presumption" constitutes a wholly false and fictious basis for legislation in veteran's aid. This is confirmed by a recent resolution of so eminent a body as the American Medical Association.

The spectacle of the Government practicing subterfuge in order to say that wnat did not happen in this war did happen in the war, impairs the integrity of Government, reduces the respect for Government, and undermines the morals of all the people.

The practical effects of this enactment of a fictitious "presumption" into law are widespread. It creates a long train of injustices and inequalities. The first is to place men of this class who have in fact been disabled in civil life since the war upon the same basis as the men who were wounded in battle and suffered the exposures of the trenches.

380,000 Possible Cases.

But a second injustice immediately arises. The Veterans Bureau estimates that there are somewhere in the neighborhood of 380,000 possible cases of disability incurred in civil life since the war among the 4,300,000 living veterans. By this legislation all except somewhere between 75,000 and 100,000 of these men are excluded from this aid by the Government except for benefits which they already receive by hospitalization, the bonus and insurance. This bill would, therefore, create a preferred group of one-third among the men who are suffering from disabilities incurred in civil life since the war.

The further injustice of this bill may become more apparent when it is realized that men who were enrolled in the Army who remained but comparatively few days or weeks in service, without ever leaving their home States, will receive aid upon the same basis as those men who passed through the battle of the Argonne. They may come upon the Government pay roll for life in case of total disability at rates from $80 to $200 per month. Beyond this again, under the provisions of this bill as it affects the existing law, many thousands of men who have in fact incurred their disabilities in civil life may receive larger allowances from the Government than the men actually wounded at the front.

Proof on Government.

It has been contended that the Government has the right to disprove the presumption that any of the long list of diseases enumerated in this bill are not of war origin. But the burden of such proof is placed upon the Government, and all the experience of the Veterans Bureau shows that such rebuttal is ineffective, as the evidence surrounding such questions, as a rule, can not be secured or made clear and conclusive.

Additional inequalities and injustices arise from certain other provisions. At the present time any veteran who may become ill or disabled as the incident of civil life is received in Government hospitals, if there is a vacant bed, and given free treatment. This bill provides that such cases received in the hospitals shall, in addition to free treatment, also receive cash allowances, and that a dependency allowance under certain restrictions shall be made to their families. The number of men of this type who are taken into Federal hospitals depends upon the number of beds unoccupied by men actually disabled from illness or injury incurred during the war, that being the major purpose of the hospitals.

It is, therefore, a matter of accident or luck as to whether a given veteran ill from sickness arising in civil life is able to secure these facilities. An ill and destitute veteran may not have the luck to find a bed, in which case he neither receives treatment nor does his family receive an allowance Yet a veteran of independent means may be fortunate enough to secure both. This is neither equitable nor just.

No Service Required

This bill departs from the traditional basis upon which we have given support to the veterans of the Civil and Spanish Wars. We have always recognized the principle in that legislation that the veterans of less than 90 days' service, unless they have a disability incurred in line of duty, should be excluded from benefits because such men have not been called to actual war service. Recently in the Spanish War veterans' bill, against my protest, this was reduced to 70 days, but in the bill we are here considering, there is no requirement whatever of service, and a man with one day's service after enrollment is entitled to all of the benefits. Here we create at once an injustice between veterans of different wars and between men whose lives were endangered and those who incurred no risks.

There is no provision in this bill against men of independent means claiming benefits from the Government for these disabilities arising in civil life. Surely it is of vital importance to the taxpayers, who directly or indirectly include all veterans themselves, that they shall not be called upon to contribute to such men of independent means. Moreover, it is equally important that the amount the Nation can find for this burden should not be dissipated over those without need, but should be devoted to those who are in actual need.

A declaration of destitution and pauperism from veterans is not necessary. I have never advocated such a declaration. It can, however, easily be provided in any legislation that the Secretary of the Treasury should return to the Veterans' Bureau a statement of the men who are exempt from income taxes at some level to be determined by Congress.

I have already protested to Congress in other connections against the inclusion of compensation for disablement due to vicious habits. This bill contemplates compensation for some misconduct disabilities, the whole conception of which must be repugnant to decent family life.

Wasteful and Extravagant.

No government can proceed with intelligence that does not take into account the fiscal effects of its actions. This bill, in a wasteful and extravagant manner, goes far beyond the financial necessities of the situation. Gen. Hines, after renewed examination, reports that this bill, as finally passed, will cost $110,000,000 the first year; that this will increase to an annual burden of $235,000,000 and continue during the life of these veterans. The provision in the bill for review after three years, in my view, will never relieve us from commitments once entered upon.

And this is but a portion of the costs, because the bill, as enacted, contains indirect liabilities to the Government of uncertain but very large possibilities. The amendments to section 19 of the World War veterans' act will increase the liabilities of the Government by a total of over $40,000,000 and the amendments to section 206 or 209 of the act will increase liabilities to a substantial but uncertain amount.

These costs are beyond the capacity of the Government at the present time witnout increased taxation. They are larger than the veterans have themselves proposed.

Beyond this, and of vital importance, are the potential obligations which are created and must finally be met. For instance, if we attempt to set up a system of relief to veterans suffering from disabilities incurred in civil life by establishing the presumption of this bill, then we can not with fairness stop with a preferred group of 75,000 to 100,000 men. We shall have to extend these presumptions, step by step, over the entire group of 380,000.

The additional cost upon the basis of the first 100,000 could readily add another $150,000,000 or $200,000,000 a year. If we are going to make cash allowances to men disabled from sickness or accident arising in civil life now in Government hospitals, together with cash allowances to their families, we must consider the fate of others in the same class who are so unfortunate as not to be able to find an empty bed. There are approximately 13,000 such cases of illness arising from civil life in the Federal hospitals at the present time.

The medical council of the Veterans' Bureau states that there are at least 89,000 such cases that will eventually have a right to hospitalization if beds are available. In addition to hospitals now building, we should need to expend another $140,000,000 in construction to take care of such further cases, and then be faced with an annual maintenance cost of about $60,000,000, all in addition to what we are providing now. To this again must be added the cash allowance to the further number of men for whom we make additional beds available in hospitals and the allowance to their families, which will in itself aggregate a further great annual sum.

It is disagreeable to point out these potentialities lest it be thought that the Government begrudges its veterans. I am not presenting these reasons in any such sense, but in order that Congress and the country may be apprised of the real magnitude of the burden imposed and of the injustices arising from this legislation.

Even if I were able to overlook these burdens, for monetary considerations are, indeed, secondary, I can not overlook the discriminations and injustices which this legislation creates, together with its failure to meet the real need that exists today among our veterans in a fundamental and sound manner.

HOOVER AID DEFENDS DISTRICT FUNDS BILL

Secretary Newton Asserts White House Looks for Measure's Success.

REMAINS IN DEADLOCK

To Walter Newton, a former member of the House and now secretary to President Hoover, it is "inconceivable" that the $44,000,000 District appropriation bill for the fiscal year beginning Tuesday should fail to pass.

Secretary Newton said as much in the course of a visit to the Capitol yesterday afternoon. The White House, he said, was anxious to see the bill passed for two reasons—first, because it is an important bill, and, second, because its failure would result in unemployment.

Nevertheless, the bill still was hung up in a Senate and House deadlock yesterday, with neither side showing any inclination to yield.

Passage Is Foreseen.

The House still is insisting on a Federal contribution of $9,000,000 and the Senate continues to hold out for $10,000,000.

And yet, although the session has only a few more days to run, there are reasons to believe that the bill eventually will pass.

For one thing, Representative Robert G. Simmons (Republican), Nebraska, says that there is no hurry about putting through an emergency resolution to continue the current appropriation. This would give the city enough money to run on in case the 1931 bill fails.

Simmons Divulges Plans.

Mr. Simmons, who had been expected to call up the emergency resolution, said that he might call it up today, tomorrow or Monday. Inasmuch as it could be adopted in a very short time, he said, there was no reason why it should not be held up until Monday. If present plans carry through, this will be the eve of adjournment day.

The Nebraskan declared that, so far as he is concerned, nothing more will be done to save the 1931 bill.

He made this statement after announcing that he had no intention of asking for a further meeting between the House and Senate conferees.

Senator Hiram Bingham (Republican), of Connecticut, the chief Senate conferee, says that if there is to be another meeting, Representative Simmons will have to ask for it.

The latter said yesterday that if the $44,000,000 bill does die, the blame will be on those local newspapers that have been urging the Senate to kill the measure rather than yield to the House.

DRY ADMINISTRATORS NAMED FOR 11 ENFORCEMENT ZONES

prohibition districts, will remain with the Treasury Department in the new Bureau of Industrial Alcohol, which will have charge of the issuance of permits. He will be stationed at Richmond, Va.

Under the arrangements of districts and reassignment of administrators, effective Tuesday, District No. 4 will include Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and the District of Columbia, and Richmond will be headquarters for the District. Mr. Merrick, the new administrator, has been in charge of the old Virginia district, with headquarters at Richmond, since December 1, 1926, and therefore will not have to move.

Announcement made by the Department of Justice yesterday shows that instead of 27 prohibition districts, as has been the case under the Treasury Department, there will now be only 12, corresponding in a certain sense to the 10 judicial circuits of the country. The new line-up of prohibition districts is as follows:

District 1—New England States with headquarters at Boston; District 2—New York State with headquarters in New York City and Porto Rico attached for administration purposes; District 3—Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware with headquarters at Philadelphia; District 5—Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana and Texas with headquarters at New Orleans; District 6—Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee, headquarters in Cincinnati; District 7—Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, headquarters in Chicago; District 8—Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, headquarters at St. Paul; District 9—Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, Oklahoma, headquarters in Kansas City; District 10—Colorado Wyoming, Utah, New Mexico, Arizona, headquarters in Denver; District 11—California, Nevada with headquarters at San Francisco, and Hawaiian Islands attached—District 12—Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, headquarters at Seattle, with Alaska attached.

In each of the new districts the Department of Justice will be represented by a prohibition administrator and the Treasury Department by a permit supervisor. Direct responsibility for actual enforcement work will rest with deputy administrators of whom there will be one for each of the 87 judicial districts, as now.

Administrators already named by the Department of Justice, effective July 1, are: District 1, Jonathan S. Lewis; District 2, Andrew McCampbell; District 3, John Pennington; District 4, R. Q. Merrick; District 5, Robert E. Tuttle; District 6, W. N. Woodruff; District 7, J. F. J. Herbert; District 8, M. L. Harney; District 9, George H. Wark; District 10, John F. Vivian; District 11, William G. Walker; District 12, Carl Jackson.

All deputy administrators will remain on duty as they have in the past, at least for the present. All assignments under the shift will be temporary, but most of them will become permanent, the Department of Justice announcement said.

Permit supervisors named in the general reassignment of positions include many of the old prohibition administrators. Among these will be Andrew McCampbell, who goes to New York, succeeding Maurice Campbell, E. C. Yellowley at Chicago, S. O. Wynne at Philadelphia and O. D. Jackson at New Orleans. All former administrators remain at their posts as permit supervisors.

Maurice Campbell goes to Boston in that position, while William R. Woods, jr., former administrator at Los Angeles, shifts to San Francisco as supervisor. Other supervisors named are R. E. Joyce, Cincinnati; S. B. Ovale, St. Paul; S. S. Haley, Kansas City; G. E. Elsworth, Denver, and F. R. McReynolds, Seattle.

John F. Herbert, former administrator at Baltimore who was the central figure in an outburst of criticism by Senator Wheeler when he was sent to Helena, gets an important post under the new plan. He will have charge of enforcement in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin.

Of the appropriation of $13,500,000 made for the ensuing year to the Bureau of Prohibition in the Treasury Department, $9,000,000 has been allocated to enforcement and $4,500,000 to supervision of permits. Of the personnel of 3,700 men, 1,750 agents, investigators and special agents will be transferred to the Department of Justice and 1,700 will remain in the Treasury Department. A force of 250 special agents will continue to investigate wholesale violations of the law.

The new administrator for the area including the District of Columbia joined the Prohibition Bureau on December 1, 1919, as an agent. He was assigned to duty at Greenville, S. C. On May 1, 1922, he was made divisional chief with headquarters at Savannah, Ga. Then on March 15, 1923, he was named chief of general prohibition agents for the State of New York and in December, 1926, was named to his post as administrator with headquarters in Richmond, a position he has since held.

In a statement accompanying the announcement of reassignment of districts, administrators and supervisors, Attorney General Mitchell declared that the Department of Justice would "endeavor to secure that degree of law enforcement which can only come through the united efforts of the State and Federal governments" supported by "the large body of citizens" who believe the law ought to be obeyed.

"The department will put forth a special effort to confer with authorities of each State, or at least those who have enforcement statutes of their own, relative to the part the States may play in the performance of this difficult task," the Attorney General said.

Declaring that the Constitutional amendment made the prohibition law a supreme law of the land, Mr. Mitchell added, "the moral obligation to take measures to enforce the eighteenth amendment rests alike on Federal and State governments. The power is concurrent and therefore the duty is concurrent. For these reasons it was necessarily understood that State governments and the Federal Government would each take a part in the enforcement. In those States which have repealed enforcement statutes, and whose authorities do not perform a proper share of the work, there have been and will continue to be, grave deficiencies in enforcement."

The man gave his name as Harry Chester Smith, 26 years old, a bondsman of Leesburg, Va. Taken in custody on the porch of an N street house near Four-and-One-Half street, on description furnished by the candy shop operator, Smith was charged with making a false police report and intoxication. Sunday Painter Freed By Court in Arlington

Anti-Sunday blue law forces won a victory yesterday in the Arlington County, Va., Circuit Court when Judge Walter T. McCarthy reversed the decision of the police court in the case of C. B. Rosenberger, who was recently convicted of violating the old State blue law by painting his house on Sunday.

Judge McCarthy held that the defendant was not guilty in that he was not engaged in a trade because he received no remuneration for his work.

Summer Schools To Open as Usual

Failure of Supply Bill Not to Stop Sessions, Ballou Says.

Failure of the District appropriation bill will not interfere with the opening of summer schools on July 7, Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou announced yesterday.

If the supply bill fails to pass, summer schools will be operated on the same basis as last year, the superintendent said. Dr. Ballou based his confidence on recent conferences with the District Commissioners and the District auditor.

If the appropriation bill does not pass, the principal loss will be an additional sum of $3,000 to be used for the opening of some new summer schools. Such an enlargement would give students the advantage of smaller classes, it was explained. The superintendent also announced that summer schools this year will be held at the Oyster School, instead of at the John Eaton. Other changes will be announced before the opening of the summer session.

Alleged Hotel Robber Held in $10,000 Bond

William L. Curry, of Tampa, Fla., was held under $10,000 bond for grand jury action yesterday following his arraignment in Police Court on charges of housebreaking and larceny growing out of alleged depredations at the Powhatan Hotel.

Curry was arrested at the hotel Wednesday night after Mary B. Lewis, of Moose Lake, Minn., and Mabel O. Anderson, of Duluth, Minn., had identified him as the man whom they had awakened to find rifling their room. The two women are said to have lost $170. Judge John P. McMahon fixed the high bond after it was revealed that Curry is a traveling man and has no definite address.

$5,000 Bond Set in Larceny Case.

Charged with housebreaking and larceny, Eugene Washington, Negro, said to be on probation from Joliet, Ill., was assessed bond of $5,000 yesterday when arraigned before Judge John P. McMahon in Police Court. The bond is to hold the man for grand jury action. porting season, during which the prohibition is effective.

The Blue Ridge belt contains approximately 12,000,000 orchard trees, nearly all of bearing age. By reason of climatic conditions, Virginia has led all American States in apple exporting.

Winchester is said to be the largest export market in America, 75 per cent of the local crop usually going to English ports.

Barrel and box manufacturers and other allied industries will, it was said, feel effects of the British prohibition. Shipment of "early export" and similar grades was to have started next week. Growers and packing contractors were completing arrangements for opening the season when news of the ban threw their arrangements into confusion.

SENTENCES GIVEN 11 IN INDIAN TROUBLES

Six Men and Five Women Get Six Months in Prison for Rioting.

ONE GAINS HIS RELEASE

Bombay, June 26 (A.P.).—The government bore down on India's Nationalists today for their civil disobedience activities, sentencing six men and five women to prison.

Four women rated as prominent—Urmila Devi, Bimal Prativa Devi, Jyotrimayee Ganguly and Mohini Devi—were sentenced to six months' simple imprisonment at Calcutta for their part in demonstrations connected with the anniversary of the death of C. R. Das, brother of Urmila Devi. Women Nationalist volunteers besieged the courtroom while the trial was in progress.

Another report said a 16-year-old girl had been imprisoned in Bengal for six months after conviction on a charge of publishing a book calculated to undermine the loyalty of the police.

Padamra Jain and Madanlal Misra, secretaries of the provincial Hindusbaba and Burrabazar Congress committees, respectively, were tried in Calcutta at the same time as the four prominent women. They were sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment each.

Other men sentenced were Purushottamdas Tandon, "the dictator" of the civil disobedience movement in the united provinces; Shiva Prasad Gupta, treasurer of the all-India Congress committee, and Narendra Deva, general secretary of the provincial congress committee. They were tried at Benares and each was given three months' rigorous imprisonment.

Two others were sentenced at Karachi on charges of inciting a breach of the law. Acharava Gidwani, Karachi education officer, and Laini Mehrota, business man, were given one year each.

Another prominent Nationalist was released, however, Vallabhai Patel, brother of V. J. Patel, resigned speaker of the Indian Legislative Assembly, finished his term at Sabarmathi Jail pronounced three months ago—at the beginning of the Mahatma Gandhi movement—and went to Ahmadabad. He is one of the Mahatma's most prominent assistants.

DOSH IS ACQUITTED; MAY RESUME DUTY

Montgomery County Policeman Cleared of Charge That He Beat Veteran.

ALLEGED VICTIM FINED

Following his acquittal yesterday on charges of assaulting a prisoner, Montgomery County Policeman Douglas Dosh probably will be reinstated immediately to his post at the Bethesda substation, it was intimated yesterday by county authorities. Dosh was suspended when charges were first filed.

Dosh was acquitted in Rockville Police Court on charges preferred by Allen A. Stuart, of McKeesport, Pa., a patient at Mount Alto Veterans' Bureau Hospital. Stuart was sentenced to pay a fine of $25 or serve 25 days in jail. He told the court that he would have to take the jail sentence, as he had no money.

Stuart charged that Dosh had struck him with a blackjack several times while he was a prisoner in the cellroom at the Bethesda substation. He admitted, however, that he had been drinking prior to his arrest by County Policeman James McAuliffe.

Charles E. Myers, foreman of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., testified that he followed Dosh down the stairs to the cellroom and that the prisoner made a leap at Dosh, whereupon Dosh knocked him down. The man then got up and made another rush, he said, whereupon Dosh again knocked him down. He said that he had watched the policeman's blackjack all through the scuffle and that the latter had not used the weapon.

Dosh's story corroborated Myers' save that he said he had lost his blackjack the day before and did not have it with him at the time of the scuffle.

Berliner and John D. Fitzgerald. The term of incoporation was specified as eight months so that members of the alliance will be able to vote on the desirability of incorporation at the next regular meeting this fall.

Air Pilot Sheds Street Suit In Midair, But Loses Pants

Bathing suits are the latest fashion in flying costumes for air mail pilots, but others who care less for style are merely discarding shirts and trousers in a futile effort to keep cool in the clouds these summer nights.

Strange as it may seem, the cockpit of an airplane is not the refreshing resort a layman might think. The temperature sometimes hits 120 degrees as hot air from the motor rushes past.

Dick Merrill and Johnny Kytle are credited with the bathing suit innovation on the New York-Washington-Atlanta route. Dick Bransom, another pilot, tried the undressing idea and thereby lost his trousers Tuesday night.

Many fliers strip to the waist after leaving the ground.

Truck Driver and Boy Hurt in Car Accidents

After a collision between an automobile and a bread truck yesterday at Second street and Massachusetts avenue northeast, Benjamin Marshall, of 330 T street northwest, driver of the truck, was taken to Casualty Hospital with injuries said to be serious. Putnam Rogers, 23 years old, of 154 T street northeast, was said by police to be the driver of the car. Marshall's hurts were diagnosed as shock, lacerations and possible internal injuries.

Willis Johnson, 10 years old, of 1411 North Carolina avenue, was treated at Casualty Hospital yesterday for lacerations of the right leg, sustained, police say, when he was struck by a car driven by Laurence Crawford, 24 years old, of 1602 Ames street northeast. The accident occurred at Fifteenth and C streets northeast.

House Asked to Vote State Liquor Control

Representative Bacon (Republican), New York, in a joint resolution introduced in the House yesterday proposes to amend the eighteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution so as to permit States that so desire to take over complete control of the manufacture, transportation and sale of liquor within their own borders.

The resolution provides for ratification by specially called conventions in the several States rather than by the legislatures. This method, he contends, is in accord with the fifth article of the Constitution. Furthermore, ratification by convention would place the issue squarely before the people themselves and not confuse it with other matters, he claims.

Broken Cable Forces Excursion Ship to Halt

Snapping of a cable on its steering apparatus caused the excursion steamer Mayflower, loaded with passengers totaling almost its capacity of 700, to make a forced landing yesterday afternoon at a dock in Alexandria.

Operated by the Mount Vernon and Marshall Hall Steamboat Co. as a substitute for the liner Charles MacAlester, which is laid up for repairs after breaking down twice on trips recently, the Mayflower was returning from its afternoon trip to Marshall Hall when the accident occurred. The boat managed to negotiate the short distance to the dock, where a number of passengers chose to land. The craft, after an hour's repairs, proceeded to the Seventh street wharf.

Man Petitions Court For Absolute Divorce

Naming a corsepondent, Clifford D. Grimsley, of Potomac avenue southeast, near Fourteenth street, yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to grant him an absolute divorce from Ethel Grimsley, of Third street northeast, near D street.

The husband alleges that he and his wife were married November 4, 1924, and that they lived together until March 23, 1925, when, he states, he learned of his wife's misconduct. They separated at that time and have not lived together since, he avers. He alleges that his wife, under the name of the corespondent, committed many acts of indiscretion between July 2 last and November 15 last.

UP TO THE SENATE.

The action of the House in sustaining the President's veto and passing the substitute veterans' bill puts up to the Senate the question whether it will cooperate in enacting a more acceptable veterans' law or whether all relief legislation will fail for this session.

President Hoover's veto message completely discredits the bill that was rushed through both houses and then discarded by the House. It is doubtful if veterans having any knowledge of the subject would now support the Senate if it should persist in favoring that measure, or any of its main provisions.

The President makes it very plain to Congress and the country that he is not trying to prevent the enactment of a law giving relief to disabled veterans, even if the cost of such relief should reach a formidable figure. What he desires is fairness to all veterans who are disabled and in need of assistance from the Government.

By sustaining the veto the House has prevented a viciously unfair measure from becoming law. The Republicans of the House are to be congratulated upon their action, even if it is eleventh-hour wisdom impressed upon them by the President. The fact that the House majority is anxious to cooperate with the party leader is significant, and may prove of great importance when other legislation is considered.

It would be too much to expect the Senate to concur in the passage of the Johnson bill without making amendments which will give rise to controversy and possible deadlock or another veto. The bill is easily subject to criticism, having been hastily drawn, but it is obviously an improvement upon the bill that has been killed.

Senate amendments excessively increasing the pension to veterans, thereby making increased taxation unavoidable, will probably meet determined opposition in the House, and if the House should accept them the President may veto the new bill.

Now that the attention of the country has been called to the remarkable situation that has developed, there is universal approval of President Hoover's vigorous speech and decisive action. The people are not objecting to more generous relief legislation for the veterans, but public confidence in the Senate has been badly shaken, and anything it may do in regard to veteran legislation will be sharply scrutinized. As matters stand, the people feel that they must rely upon the President and the House to protect them against recklessly improvident and vicious legislation proposed by the Senate.

The integrity of the Senate is on trial in this legislation. The public will not now believe that senators of either political party are above playing politics with public money unless the sinister record of the last few days is superseded by fair and prudent legislation in behalf of the veterans.

WHITE HOUSE WINEGLASSES.

The problem of counting each year the 1,800 wineglasses in the White House has been only partially solved by the recent action of those who had the crystal carefully wrapped, placed in barrels with nailed-down lids, and stored away in the basement. The belief that it would save time, effort and money if, instead of annually counting 1,800 beakers individually they should be counted in barrel lots, is not fully in accordance with the laws of economy and efficiency. At best the problem has been only postponed. Next year an inventory will have to be made, and efficiency requires that the contents of each barrel shall be examined and compared with the inventory.

The purpose for which these glasses were fashioned having been outlawed, the problem could have been disposed of by calling in a few huskies from the secretariat and, furnishing them each a presidential chair leg, giving them this terse order: "Go to it, boys —smash each and every one of these unlawful goblets!" But this was not done. Nor were the glasses placed in the National Museum; neither were they sold nor distributed among the embassies and legations. The action taken was, therefore, a rare piece of evasion, calculated to meet the approval of drys and wets alike. The drys can now follow suit and store their own beakers away "permanently," while the wets can take comfort in the knowledge that the goblets are available for future emergencies.

NEW ENFORCEMENT SYSTEM.

Just prior to the transfer of the duty of enforcing the eighteenth amendment from the Treasury to the Department of Justice the Attorney General has issued a statement in which he outlines the changes which the transfer will necessitate. The principal change will be the consolidation of the existing 27 districts into 12 new districts, with headquarters, respectively, in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Richmond, New Orleans, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Paul, Kansas City, Denver, San Francisco and Seattle.

Because the prohibition "unit" is to be divided under the new plan, one official, known as prohibition administrator, representing the Department of Justice, and another known as the permit supervisor, attached to the Treasury Department, will be assigned headquarters in each district in order that there may be close cooperation between the two departments and speedy action with respect to the issuance of permits.

The direct responsibility for the actual work of enforcement will rest primarily with the deputy administrators, of whom there will be, as now, one in each of the 87 judicial districts. The appropriation made for the fiscal year which begins July 1 totals $13,500,000. Of this fund $9,000,000, approximately, will be disbursed by the Department of Justice in the work of enforcement and $4,500,000 by the Treasury in the supervision of permits.

In connection with the publication of the outline of the program the Attorney General issues a statement in which he says: "The moral obligation to take measures to enforce the eighteenth amendment rests alike on the Federal and State Governments. The power is concurrent and, therefore, the duty is concurrent. * * * In those States which have repealed enforcement statutes and whose authorities do not perform a proper share of the work there have been, and will continue to be, grave deficiencies in enforcement." But Mr. Mitchell adds that the department will "put forth a special effort to confer with authorities of each State, or at least those who have enforcement statutes of their own, relative to the part the States may play * * * to secure that degree of law observance and enforcement which can only come through the united efforts of the State and Federal Governments, supported by the large body of citizens who, whatever their views toward the object of the eighteenth amendment, believe that the law of the land should be respected and obeyed."

SENATOR SMOOT'S VACATION.

After 28 years of continuous service in the United States Senate, during which long period he has missed only nine days, Senator Reed Smoot has gone on a vacation which will probably extend to Honolulu. Not only has the Utah statesman made a record for practically uninterrupted attendance upon the sessions of the Senate, but he attended every meeting of the finance committee, of which he is chairman, throughout the long discussions of the tariff bill.

During the years which have passed since he first took the oath of office he has been reelected by the people of Utah four times, and will probably continue to serve the State in the Senate as long as he lives.

Reed Smoot is one of the most industrious and painstaking legislators who ever came out of the West. He is the first from the far western section to have been honored with the chairmanship of the committee on finance, in some respects the most important committee in the Senate. No chairman ever worked harder in the framing of a revenue bill than has the senator from Utah during the last seventeen months. His successful efforts to steer the Hawley-Smoot bill from the Capitol to the White House brought much abuse from the Democratic minority and disloyal Republicans, but his object was to help in carrying out the pre-election pledges of his own party. In that he has achieved success.

If any member of either house of Congress is entitled to a long vacation it is Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah.

VARDAMAN AND BARNES.

Press dispatches note the death on Wednesday of two men who were very much in the limelight a dozen years ago. For the last eight or ten years little has been heard of James K. Vardaman, of Mississippi, who died in Birmingham, Ala., yet during the six years of his service in the United States Senate, which ended in 1919, he was looked upon as one of the most striking Southerners in Congress; not only because of his long locks and distinctive clothing, but because of his picturesque language. Of course Vardaman was a Democrat, one of those bitter partisans who can never see anything like saving grace in their political opponents. He had been completely lost to public ken since the end of his senatorial term. Vardaman was 68 years old when he died.

William Barnes, of Albany, N. Y., where he published the principal Republican "up-State" newspaper for many years, was a power in the political life of New York up to the time when he got into a controversy with Theodore Roosevelt. Barnes selected State and county officers by the score, and had a great deal to do with the selection of Federal appointees, as chairman of the Republican committee, and as the right-hand man of Senator "Tom" Platt. But in 1912 he was denounced by Roosevelt, then candidate of the Progressive party, as a corrupt politician. He sued for libel, lost his case, and began to lose his political power. He soon faded out of first page news stories, and like Senator Vardaman, who died on the same day, he has been practically forgotten for the past decade.

The simultaneous deaths of these two men, who held important places in their respective political organizations and who were as unlike physically, mentally and sartorially as their homes were far apart, served to bring their names before newspaper readers once more as a reminder that the United States is a world in itself, within which men may occupy important places without knowledge of one another's existence.

ALCOHOLIC PRESCRIPTIONS.

The speech of Dr. William Gerry Morgan, of this city, in taking office as president of the American Medical Association, in which he bitterly denounced restrictions placed by the Volstead act on the prescription of alcohol by physicians will undoubtedly provoke wide comment, both from the supporters and the opponents of the present regulation.

Dr. Morgan's announcement that a recent questionnaire showed a majority of the members of the American Medical Association who answered believed whisky to be "necessary" in the treatment of disease would seem to be a culmination of the association's gradual drift from the resolution passed by it in 1917 declaring, in part, "that the use of alcohol as a therapeutic agent should be discouraged."

Dr. Morgan, apparently voicing the sentiments of the association, contends that the present restriction on the prescription of alcohol by physicians is a reproach to the medical profession. And that the association intends to do more than register a protest may be gathered from the president's statement: "We have in our keeping the honor of our profession, and when a substantial number of that profession does believe in the use of alcohol, and their right to use it is denied by Congress, we are summoned to decisive action."

EXPLAINING THE SLUMP

Letter in the New York Times.

The financial sections of each of the several Saturday and Sunday papers that I saw contained three or four articles by different financial writers attributing the recent plunge of the whole stock market list to the contemporaneous fall in prices of commodities.

I was minded of the commuters in club cars, all of them of the same general type of social interests, discussing day by day the status of some political question and going to their homes contented that public opinion agreed with their views; but reading the papers with indignation the morning after election. So may feel all the herring in the same school, and I make no doubt they do; but the bluefish will have another school of thought.

Thus we may rest unawed by consensus of opinion in like tribes and gangs, and ask questions.

Undoubtedly stocks and commodities both would react in similar manner to one factor enveloping them alike. Dear money, for example, would result in both being rated at lower figures in money terms, for if money be worth more, a less amount of it will buy other things that else had stood unchanged. But money has not all at once got dearer; on the contrary, money is cheaper. And here there is no room for dispute, for money—which is to say, the possession and use of it—is the one thing valued in terms of itself. The value of money is quoted in money. And now less money will buy the use of more money. So money is cheaper and, ex hypothesi, commodities and stocks should have risen. As they did not, the answer is clear that this fall is not the reciprocal of the change in value of money.

With this out of the way we may come to what the financial writers say—namely, stocks slumped because commodities fell. Let us now examine this. To take an example, copper fell from, say 18 cents to 12 cents and less. With it fell the stocks of those who produce copper. So far, so good. But how about those who use copper and have to buy it? Their stocks fell too. Did they fall because they now could buy their supplies for less money? Cotton fell. Tough on planters. But cotton mills are now able to buy their raw material for a third less and, by reducing their selling prices not so much, stimulate sales and make a wider margin. Was that why their stocks fell? Manifestly, no. And likewise with motors and meats, and dresses and sport goods. Cheaper commodities did not force down all the stocks any more than cheaper money did.

The cause, then, must be sought elsewhere, in something affecting the consumers of copper and cotton, &c., as well as their producers. And what the tariff's influence was is not a basic question; nor is it fruitful to argue the techniques of the stock market, bears, margin calls, sympathetics. We seek the fundamental cause.

Now if men and women in general got the notion to eat cheaper foods, wear their old clothes longer, ride less or stick to the old bus and the old midiron for another season, that is different. A recession in the spending habits of the whole community, the American community, and the world community with it, would do the trick and do it quickly and thoroughly.

I expect maybe that is what is happening. It has been discussed in the papers quite some. If it is so, very good. Let's accept it, and tighten our belts and do likewise. After a while lower prices will tempt the dollars out again. But in the meantime, let's have less of these patent-medicine explanations that tell us in chorus the reason public utility stocks are off is because the power transmission companies are buying their copper wire cheap. While the World Thinks Age Brings Wisdom, the Young M. D. Must Grow a Beard.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MANY thousands of young men, having just finished high school, are wondering whether they should begin their careers now or get four more years of training.

Most of them are without definite ambition except to get ahead—to make money—to climb.

The question, then, is whether a college education will help them to get ahead—will make enough difference to justify the expenditure of time and effort.

The answer is easy to find.

Many modern Americans—perhaps most of them—think of education as a preparation for usefulness—a training for the business of money-making.

But another school of thought—an older one—regards education as a preparation for the business of living—as a polish acquired by gentlemen, without which one can not enjoy the better things life offers or feel at ease among the elect.

This conception of education is discussed very little, but everybody is aware of it and it affects thousands of careers.

Name any rich and famous man who is a university graduate and you can find several other rich and famous men who were his classmates.

Education alone did not make these men successful.

Most of them came of good stock, absorbed decency and culture in childhood, and got from their families enough money to give them a start.

They would have climbed without college training.

But the fact that they are college men makes the world give college training all the credit for their success.

"No wonder they are such fine men," says the world. They went to college and thus acquired brains, character, fame and wealth. Go to college and do likewise."

Unfortunately it isn't that simple.

No college can save a rotter or a born failure; no lack of formal education can keep a genius down.

But, other things being equal, the college man has a better chance because the world thinks well of college men.

He gets some benefit of the reputation won by fine men who went to college and later won fame.

He "belongs."

That is snobbish—the typical snobbishness of a democracy—but it is also the plain unvarnished truth, and the truth makes men free—free of illusions and false hopes.

If all fine gentlemen once split rails, a short course in rail-splitting will get you started right.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THAT OLD WOODEN CLUB.

Time was and that was long ago when golf I first began,
I had a driver that I loved, like every golfing man.
Its shaft was made of hickory, with just the proper whip,
The head was small and trimly turned and slender was the grip.
And though I had to struggle then to score in ninety-nine,
Full many a splendid drive I got with that old club of mine.

I carried it year after year. I scarred its shiny head,
A splinter in the shaft I healed with glue and winding thread,
And golfers came and golfers went,
but still that club I played,
And still my drives were straight and fair, with just a little fade.
Though others purchased wooden sets of every new design,
I seemed to do about as well with that old club of mine.

With favoring fortune I began, as golfers always do,
To put aside the trusty old to venture with the new.
An ivory inset club I tried, a bulger followed soon,
Then clubs by numbers registered, proclaimed a golfer's boon,
Then shafts of steel were introduced. To buy I fell in line,
And to a caddy boy I gave that good old club of mine.

Today that caddie boy came in, his face a joy to see;
The course I shoot in ninety-two he'd shot in seventy-three.
With pride he talked about his drives, all straight and long and true,
Which if you score in seventy-three is what you have to do,
But what a shock to vanity and outfits superfine!
That youngster made those splendid drives with that old club of mine!

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

IF THE LINDBERGH BABY PROVES A CHIP-OFF-THE-OLD-BLOCK.

The scene is the home of Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh. It is 3 p. m., and the colonel has completed a round-trip flight to Chile, which he began at noon. Mrs. Lindbergh, hearing him enter, calls to him from the nursery.

Mrs. Lindbergh (with a note of alarm)—Charles!

Lindy—Yes, dear?

Mrs. Lindbergh—Come here quickly, please!

Lindy (rushing in)—What's the matter?

Mrs. Lindbergh (in distress)—Baby's been trying to fly across the room on his rattle again!

Lindy (anxiously)—Did he make it?

Mrs. Lindbergh—No, he got only from the floor to the bureau.

Lindy—That's very discouraging.

Mrs. Lindbergh—Not when you consider he flew by dead reckoning.

(There is an interval of ten minutes, during which the colonel leaves the nursery to plan a flight to the coast and back before dusk, or something.)

Mrs. Lindbergh—Charles! Charles!

Lindy—What is it this time, dear?

Mrs. Lindbergh—Hurry!

Lindy (rushing in)—What's happened?

Mrs. Lindbergh—Look! the baby!

Lindy (looking about excitedly)—Where?

Mrs. Lindbergh (pointing)—In the chandelier!

Lindy—How'd he get up there?

Mrs. Lindbergh—A moment ago he was playing with his Noah's Ark and the next minute he was up in the chandelier.

Lindy (with a glance at his toys)—The little shaver flew up on his ark. Are you sure he was on the floor a minute ago?

Mrs. Lindbergh—Positive.

Lindy—Isn't that wonderful? Isn't it great?

Mrs. Lindbergh—What?

Lindy—It's a nonstop flight.

(The baby suddenly topples from the chandelier. Mrs. Lindbergh, terrified, picks him up.)

Lindy—Is he hurt?

Mrs. Lindbergh—I don't see a mark.

Lindy (delightedly)—Think of it, my dear! A perfect landing!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Dill Patent Bill Objectionable Because It Provides a Weapon for Patent Pirates, Says John C. Gall.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We observe with interest the editorial appearing in today's Post entitled "Patent Abuse by Trusts." The importance of the subject matter we believe justifies us in addressing you in response.

Your premise is that "when the United States Government issues a patent to an inventor, there should go with that special privilege an equal obligation not to use that patent to violate the laws of the Nation." With this premise we are in full accord.

Your conclusion apparently is, that the Dill patent bill, S. 4442, which you describe as "a bill which would make patents unenforceable so long as their owners are using them to violate the antitrust laws," is desirable and necessary legislation. We are unable to concede either the necessity or the desirability of this proposed legislation, for reasons which we shall summarize, and we regard the above description of the measure as both inaccurate and incomplete.

The obligation of which you speak is recognized by all existing laws against monopoly and restraint of trade. The courts of the United States have consistently refused to recognize any superior right in the holder of a patent to monopolize or restrain commerce. Numerous cases, including the A. B. Dick, the United Shoe Machinery and the Standard Sanitary cases, testify to this well settled attitude of the courts.

The hearings before the Senate patents committee were directed exclusively to alleged monopoly in the radio field. There was no evidence or even contention of any other abuse. Yet it is common knowledge that there is now pending in the United States District Court in Delaware an antitrust proceeding initiated May 13, 1930, against the alleged radio monopoly complained of.

In the face of settled law and procedure, and in the light of pending litigation, we emphatically deny the necessity of additional legislation. But if some legislation were necessary, it still does not follow that the pending bill is desirable, or even appropriate to the declared end.

This bill provides that in any suit for infringement of a patent it shall be a complete defense to prove that the complainant is a party to any combination, agreement, understanding, license, or cross license "relating to or involving the use or control of said patent with any patentee or other person owning or controlling patent rights that are indirectly related to or connected with the business resulting from the use or control of said patent," &c.

Not only is the offense described in the vaguest and most uncertain terms, but the obvious defect of the bill is that it readily provides a potent weapon for deliberate patent pirates. An infringement suit having been filed, the defendant does not even have to deny that he is an infringer! He simply charges that the plaintiff himself is a party to some vague understanding, and the infringement suit can not be tried until months, and perhaps years, later when the antitrust issue has been disposed of.

There is not even a requirement that the defendant who sets up this counter charge must furnish bond to indemnify the owner of a patent against loss during this period, although the committee thought, and Senator Dill agreed, that such provision was desirable. (See page 11, Hearings, May 14, 1930).

The bill is an indirect attack upon the integrity of the entire American patent system, as attested by its proponents. You reprinted a large portion of the Senate committee report, but we invite your attention to the following significant language which appears in the report, and which apparently escaped your attention:

"Now inventions are developed almost exclusively by corporations and we find that bankers and lawyers instead of investors are the real beneficiaries of the patent laws."

The importance of this matter we trust justifies this trespass upon your time and attention. We should regret to see a paper of your prestige assume an attitude so antithetical to the welfare of American industry and so inconsistent with your usual policies.

Congress Trying to Help Veterans. Physicians Should Act as Rating Board.

To the Edtior of The Post—Sir: As I am a disabled World War veteran, I am, and have been for the past ten years or so, very much interested in legislation for the veterans. I think that Congress has been very liberal in passing laws for the veterans of the World War. If the disabled veterans were getting what Congress intended they should get there would be no need of further legislation in their behalf for the time being.

The bill voted on last Monday by the Senate will not help matters a great deal. In fact, I believe that in the long run it will do the veterans more harm than good. It is a very hard matter for a number of the disabled veterans to get what they are by law entitled to receive.

If the members of Congress in both branches would insist that the veterans get what they have already provided for them by law, I am sure that there would not be so many complaints made. I firmly believe that the 6 senators who voted against the bill did the right thing, and they are just as anxious about the interest of the veterans as the 66 who voted for the bill.

These things some day will be adjusted, just as soon as Congress will pass a bill doing away with the rating boards. Let the physicians who are treating the veterans act as the rating board, as they should. Then and not until then will the veterans get a square deal.

UPRISING IN BOLIVIA GAINS, SAY REPORTS

La Paz Declared Cut Off as Government Insists That Situation Is Calm.

TROOPS FIRE ON MOBS

Buenos Aires, June 26 (A.P.).—Reports of disorders and a critical situation in Bolivia rolled in tonight despite a government communique issued at La Paz which minimized the importance of a revolutionary movement in Oruro.

The communique confirmed reports that some officials and the Camacho Regiment of the army at Oruro had taken possession of the city, telegraphing to the prefect at La Paz they favored the establishment of a new government under Ablanco Galindo, Jose Lanza, Mariaga Pande Osorto and Julio Sanjines, but added:

"The movement lacks importance. The Camacho Regiment remains isolated at Oruro, without connection with the remainder of the republic, where the garrison commanders have declared themselves firm in their loyalty to the government and the public order.

Call Demands Absurd.

"Authorities at Oruro submitted to the military movement without resisting. There were no casualties. Tranquillity reigns throughout the republic and public order is assured."

The statement said the council of ministers, meeting with Gen. Kundt, German, who commands the Bolivian army, rejected the rebels' proposal as absurd.

Meanwhile, in the face of a strict Bolivian censorship, the newspaper Critica, of Buenos Aires, said clashes of a serious nature had occurred in La Paz, with revolutionaries taking possession of the department of Cochabamba, Potosi and Santa Cruz, in addition to Oruro.

The newspaper, describing its news source as a private message from La Paz, added that former President Hernando Siles had sought protection in the American legation and that the capital, isolated, was expected to fall at any time. Its dispatch told of two regiments refusing to fight against the rebels and said Gen. Kundt had asked help from border garrisons.

Passengers reaching the frontier from La Paz told of serious disorders in the Bolivian capital since Sunday, differing as to details but agreeing that the situation was tense.

The conductor of an international train reaching Arica, Chile, said 80 persons, 17 of them students, had been killed in La Paz Sunday. Passengers reaching Arequipa, Chile, said police had killed 34, among them women and children, after a demonstration of workmen and students Sunday.

Militia Fire on Mob.

Others interviewed when they reached Buenos Aires stated that the deaths totaled 30. They told how 1,000 persons stormed police headquarters in Murillo square, bombarding it with missiles. Militiamen reinforced the troops and several volleys were fired into the mob.

Some told of another incident wherein students and Indians gathered Sunday noon in front of the home of former President Siles, shouting "down with Siles." They were dispersed but a group of students paraded in the afternoon, carrying the body of a companion alleged to have been killed by the police and shouting "down with Siles, down with Kundt."

Lima, Peru, June 26 (A.P.).—A wireless message picked up from Antofagasta and published in La Prensa here said Bolivian troops yesterday had killed 30 and wounded 100 rebels in an engagement about 500 miles from La Paz.

Dr. Paul J. Ewerhardt, of Providence, Selected for Health Post.

NOTED AS PSYCHIATRIST

Appointment of Dr. Paul J. Ewerhardt, of Providence, R. I., as director of the Washington Child Guidance Clinic, was announced yesterday by Dr. William A. White, president of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, which is sponsoring the clinic. Dr. White is superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital.

The Washington Child Guidance Clinic, according to Dr. White, will open about September 1 and probably will be located in rooms in one of the public school buildings of the city, but its services will be available to all children of the city under 16 years of age, who have nervous or mental maladjustments or who show nervous symptoms. Funds for the clinic are provided under the budget of the last Community Chest drive.

Dr. Ewerhardt is now director of mental hygiene clinics maintained in Providence and Pawtucket by the Rhode Island Society for Mental Hygiene. He is a member of many scientific organizations, including the American Medical Association, the American Psychiatric Association, the American Orthopsychiatric Society, and similar State and local bodies in Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

Dr. Ewerhardt received his medical training at Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., and has had wide experience in the private practice of psychiatry and in clinical and institutional work.

Dr. White pointed out, in making his announcement, that child guidance clinics are maintained in most large cities of the United States and that the need for such a service has long been felt in Washington in order that children in and out of school who indicate nervous abnormalities might have preventive treatment.

The staff of the clinic, in addition to Dr. Ewerhardt, will include a psychologist and psychiatric social workers to maintain contacts between homes, schools, and the clinic. Other members of the staff are to be appointed by the director with approval of the board of managers of the institute.

BYRD AT DEDICATION OF BENNETT AIRPORT

600,000 School Pupils Line Route of Procession to Brooklyn Rites.

CLUB HONORS EXPLORER

New York, June 26 (A.P.).—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd joined today with Brooklyn in paying stirring tribute to the memory of Floyd Bennett, Brooklyn's most famous aviator and companion of Byrd across the North Pole in 1926.

Admiral Byrd had a part in dedication of Floyd Bennett Airport in Jamaica on the outskirts of Brooklyn. Bennett sacrificed his life to go to the aid of the crew of the Bremen, forced to land on bleak Greenley Island on an attempted flight from Ireland to New York in 1928. Bennett rose from a sickbed to make the flight, contracted pneumonia and died.

Six hundred thousand Brooklyn school children lined the route of the procession which celebrated Brooklyn aviation day and Brooklyn had a ticker tape shower of its own as Admiral Byrd was welcomed on the steps of Borough Hall by Borough President Henry Hesterberg.

Guest of Bond Club.

Bennett was to have been chief pilot of the America on Byrd's flight to France in 1927, but was kept out by a broken leg. He was also to have been second in command on the Antarctic expedition, plans for which were forming at the time of his death.

Tonight Brooklyn honored Admiral Byrd and the memory of Floyd Bennett with a civic dinner.

Byrd was guest at noon at a luncheon given by the Bond Club of New York and he described his experiences with the weather at the pole.

Heard Breath Freezing.

"I didn't believe it at first," he said, "but one night one of the fellows came in and said that he had heard his own breath freezing. I ran out and had the same experience.

"We had to wear masks to keep our faces from freezing in the wind. The mask looked something like a baseball mask, but it had a funnel through which we breathed. Even the dogs suffered in temperature 70 below zero."

This morning Byrd was presented with a medal by the American Humane Association in appreciation of his treatment of the huskies on his expedition. The presentation was made by Minnie Maddern Fiske, a director of the association.

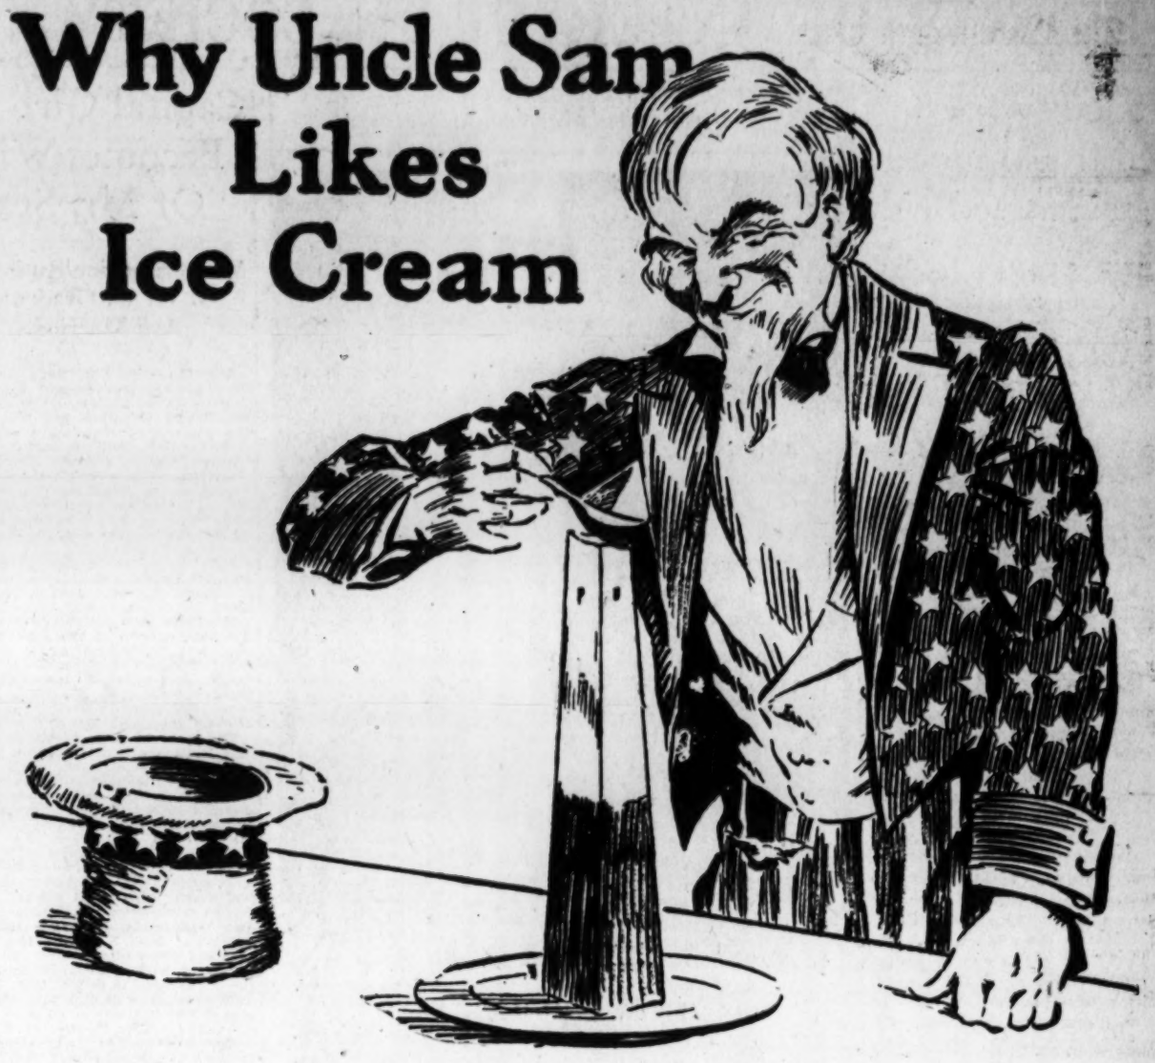
Why Uncle Sam Likes Ice Cream



IF you want to see a hungry American, you should see one on a hot day served with a dish of ice cream, in the dining-room of a European hotel.

That's when he grows really patriotic—wishes he had never left home. He gets enough ice cream to about fill a dessert spoon once.

Uncle Sam really likes ice cream—has a growing and healthful appetite for what his doctors have discovered to be the finest dessert and health-food combined ever invented.

One very special reason for his growing appetite is because he is served at the Nation's capital, and throughout Southern Dairies territory, with that "Cream of the South" known as

It goes way beyond health requirements and fully meets those of the epicure.

Society Sees Miss Mondell Become Bride

Her Marriage to Mr. Landa Attended by Diplomats.

MISS MARJORIE MONDELL, daughter of former Representative Frank W. Mondell and Mrs. Mondell, was married yesterday afternoon to Mr. Alfons Beaumont Landa, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alfonso B. Landa.

Members of the Diplomatic Corps, official and residential society attended the ceremony, which took place at 4:30 o'clock in St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, the Rev. C. Ernest Smith officiating. The church was lavishly decorated with palms, ferns and white lilies and gladioli.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father, and she wore a gown of heavy ivory satin fashioned on princess lines with long close-fitting sleeves. The long circular train fell from the waist, and the veil of tulle, caught about the head nun-fashion, fell over the satin train, with a short veil over the face as the bride went to the altar. This was thrown back during the ceremony and afterward. She carried an arm-bouquet of calla lilies.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Alexander W. Gregg, sister of the bride, who wore an organdie frock of deep Patou pink, fashioned with a long close-fitting bodice, and a circular cape forming sleeves. The skirt was tight to the knees where two tiers of circular ruffles fell to the floor. The belt was of rose velvet and the hat of organdie and linen, the shade of the frock, and she carried pink orchids.

Miss Virginia Harris was maid of honor and wore a frock made like that of the matron of honor in a paler shade of pink, with a hat to match, and also carried pink orchids.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. William Mondell, sister-in-law of the bride; Miss Bina Day Deneen, daughter of Senator Charles S. Deneen; Mrs. Arthur Schilling, of Philadelphia, and Miss Elizabeth Woodward, of Trenton, N. J. They wore dresses like those of the other attendants in shell pink with hats to match and also carried pink orchids.

The best man was Mr. Marshall Orme Exnicios, and ushers were Mr. William Mondell, brother of the bride; Mr. Arthur Condon, Mr. William Donohue 2d, Mr. Edwin O'Donnell, Mr. Frank Thyson, and Mr. Oliver Walker.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents on Sixteenth street, which was decorated with ferns and pink flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Mondell received the guests with the young couple; Mrs. Mondell wearing a gown of beige lace with a large brown hat.

Mr. and Mrs. Landa left later in the evening for New York from where they will sail on the Paris for Europe. The bride wore an ensemble of beige crepe flecked with brown, and an egg-shell blouse. Her hat and accessories were of brown.

Answers the Question
Concerning the Prices of Merchandise
THERE has been a great deal of discussion in the newspapers and "among ourselves" about the drop in commodity prices.
And now, that there may be no false impressions, we are answering the question so that every person may clearly understand our position with regard to such conditions as they may arise.
It is true, the prices of certain basic commodities have been lowered recently. Silks, cottons, woolens and other fabrics, for example, can be bought for less money than in many years. But, bear in mind, please, the drop in prices does not affect all lines of merchandise.
You have probably learned from experience, or hearsay, that for nearly seventy years this store has given its patrons every price advantage obtained in the open markets.
The present situation is no exception. We have met every lowering of market price as it occurred.
That is why customers have bought here "on faith." They feel secure in buying on that basis. They know that this store has kept and will keep faith with them.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

KEEPING YOUR GRASS PLOT GREEN.

THE next ten weeks will be the warmest of the season. We will probably have prolonged spells of extreme heat and little rain.

In some cases, where the water supply of the community becomes depleted, the authorities may be forced to prohibit citizens using even the minimum amount for the watering of gardens and lawns. Again, in places where the water is plentiful, some gardeners may have little time to devote to this work. In this connection I should like to point out one way to keep a grass plot green and healthy with the smallest amount of labor and water.

Of course, we all know that there is no vegetation that will live very long without water. Therefore the aim of all horticulturists during the warmest months of the year is the conservation of moisture.

Assuming that you have some time and some water, let me suggest that whatever care you give your lawn, you give during the early morning hours, or after sundown.

There are two reasons which prompt this advice: The first concerns your health. No matter how enthusiastic you may be about gardening, never be too strenuous during the middle of the day. No matter how urgent the work, it is not worth a spell of illness, for even a slight sunstroke is always a serious matter. In your own behalf, do your garden work early or late. If you have never gotten up with the birds, I hope you will do so this year, since a garden is so gay in those early morning hours. And at evening, as the sun dips over the hill, it will exhale an atmosphere of peace.

A second reason for advocating these hours for work is the fact that they are the only hours when the vegetation receives the full amount of water we give it. At any other time of the day much of the moisture is evaporated by the intense heat of the sun and strong winds before it has had an opportunity to penetrate the soil. Unless the water reaches the lower substrata it really is of very little use to the roots of your flowers, vines or trees.

During the next few weeks it is wise to allow your grass to become a wee bit longer than usual, which means less frequent mowing. The longer blades cast longer, more intense shadows, thus shading the soil and in a measure conserving the moisture so necessary to all plant life. For this same reason it is wise, when you do mow, to permit the cut ends to remain on the lawn instead of raking them up. These bits of grass will act as a mulch to the underlying roots and will protect them from the burning rays of the sun. So often there are large burnt patches of grass in the middle of an otherwise green grass plot. Had the grass not been cut during some prolonged hot, dry spell, these patches would not be there.

All readers' questions on growing and care of indoor and outdoor flowers and floral decorations for social functions will be answered by Miss Kift directly in this column if addressed in care of The Washington Post, or directly to readers if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is supplied.

Inoculations Kill 44 Babies.

Luebeck, Germany, June 26 (A.P.). The death toll of infants at a baby hospital here inoculated some months ago with an antituberculosis preparation increased to 44 today. Eighty-two others are ill. The magistrate yesterday instituted legal examination of two professors, one physician and a laboratory nurse involved in the charge of having negligently caused the deaths of the babies.

Jane Interprets the Mode

A smart ensemble has a black crepe skirt and a printed jacket, worn over the white georgette oddly tucked blouse. (Courtesy of Maggy Rouff, Paris.)

Paris, June 26.

SEVEN FORTY-FIVE daylight saving time tonight, I will be on my way to that fascinating city of fascinating cities, Vienna. And I promise to tell you whether the women are as beautiful and mysterious and exotic there as we have been told.

And what with the French-maid-who-is-Spanish rustling tissue paper in my ear for my packing, the love birds from Biarritz shrieking in my ear in all their green and yellow spring glory, La Chic Secretaire pounding the noiseless typewriter which noiseless or not manages to sound like a machine gun, the beautiful Russian artist home with a toothache and a few things like that, I pause to tell my deah publique something that just occurred to me about packing.

Something seems to always occur to me about packing when I'm going some place, have you noticed? It surely must occur to other women, too, this wondering how many clothes of what kind to take? Well, I'll tell you this, I would rather have too many than too few clothes on any kind of a trip. There are always porters to carry your baggage, and no matter how much hubby or brother or father may complain about excess baggage, I notice they always complain a lot more and feel annoyed if you aren't as well and as smartly dressed as any other woman wherever you might go. Remember that the next time you're packing, won't you?

Au revoir, then for Vienna, and next week I'll tell you all about it!

• • • •

And I've just put a tiny electric iron in the Lovely Lady's bag whether she likes it or not, says Alana, because even if you do get famous and make tons of money or what-not (derisive laughter from all the lovely ladies in the studio), you can't tell when you're going to get stuck in one of these funny European cities with a polite sorry, Madame, but it can't possibly be ironed until day after tomorrow!"

• • • •

Ever hear of Maggy Rouff? Well, it's one of the biggest couturiers in Paris, with an imposing establishment on the Champs Elysees. And it is from them that we occasionally get lovely things to sketch for you, like the one I have illustrated today. The dainty blouse is white georgette and hasn't it adorable frills at the hip? The flared skirt is black crepe and—just to fool you with the unexpected in ensemble chic, the jacket isn't plain black crepe like the skirt, but a print of orange and green flowers on a black background.

• • • •

Isn't that a slick idea? Practical and economical, and oh, so chic—I'm talking about this week's illustrated leaflet which tells you how to make a very smart new blouse for your tailored suit, and a couple of different kinds of sports skirt of the same material so that when you get that unexpected invitation for a week-end in the country, which you may be sure you will get, you have a one-piece sports dress out of your blouse and its matching skirt. Better send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Washington Post if you think you'll ever be in need of a smart blouse or a smart summer sports dress.

• • • •

We know you'll enjoy Dare's weekly fashion letter in the Sunday Washington Post.

Au revoir!

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

Seasons.

IT'S a funny thing, but there seems to be a "season" for everything, and column writing seems to have more seasons than anything else. In the late summer and early fall come pounds of letters of "regrets." The summer flirtations are mere memories, and disturbing ones. He promised to write—and he did not. He vowed eternal love and said no modern woman allowed a little thing like a husband to spoil her fun, and kiss her good-by before all the rest at the boat—and promptly forgot she ever existed. Thousands of letters like that. In late summer is the season for that.

Now it is early summer and the season for restlessness, longing for something unattainable. So now come the letters about "getting away from everything." The young want to run away from Dad and Mother. The old folks want to sell the home and leave unappreciative married children to their fate and let them see how much the old folks really did to help. And the young married people want to separate. The young wife is "sick of washing dishes" and the young husbands says "if this is marriage give me ten years in jail." This is the reason for that.

Happily, seasons pass. The wife who forgot the dignity of wifehood because some small-time lovemaker held her bond, eventually is able to look her husband in the face once more because in getting the children ready to go back to school she found something else to think about, and normalcy returned. By Christmas time she could not herself believe there ever had been any cheap, third-rate flirtation and horror of remorse. Because things do pass and so with this hard season of restlessness and growth it, too, will pass.

The high-school girl who wants to run away will stumble upon some wonderful story that will lift her out of herself, or mother will ask her if she would like to do her room over and decorate it all herself and to suit herself, and, presto, young mind and heart will be answered, with work and growth all will be well, just as all is well with the young trees when the sap is set free in growth. And the old folks may pack and take a trip, and almost before the train is well on its way some young mother with her child reminds them of the married daughter back home, and they wonder how she is making out all alone, and they help the young mother with her child and feel comforted, and in their hearts are ashamed that they were impatient with the tired girl at home who found motherhood trying, and who was irritable because three babies made her so. Their short trip, their little journey beyond their own small world of their own small feelings has made them grow.

With the young married folks tugging at their chains, it is hard to believe that the feeling of hatred will pass. But it will pass. It will pass whether they don't. If they remain together, they will come together in tears of growth. Life is like that. It is a series of seasons that pass. It is a series of steps to growth. It is a ladder of years to understanding. It is hard at times. It is beyond endurance of ten. Yet we do endure and grow, and after a while we almost understand. Then we are thankful that as each season came we remembered that it would pass leaving us a little wiser and a little stronger for the future. We are thankful that we never made the seasons any harder for others; that we smiled the greeting that prevented sullen silence; that we gave the kiss that melted anger into tears.

Life is like that. Just a copy-book page of lessons—if we would but read—instead of rave.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

LETTUCE.

(Bureau of Plant Industry.)

No early garden would be complete without a bed of lettuce; however, only a small space is necessary to grow plenty for the average family. In the old-fashioned garden a small bed was spaded in one corner and the seed sown broadcast and raked into the soil just as soon as the ground was dry enough to work in the spring. As the plants grew and began to crowd each other, they were thinned and those that were pulled out were used on the table. Later, when the plants became larger, they were cut off just above the ground.

Lettuce requires very rich soil and plenty of moisture, will not withstand continued hot weather, and is one of the few crops that can be planted in backyard gardens that are shaded a portion of the time. A 5-cent packet of seed will produce all the plants required for the small garden. A good method is to sow the seed in a box in the house and transplant the small plants to a bed or to rows in the garden. Lettuce is not injured by a light frost, especially if the plants have been grown in the open. The seed or plants may be planted between other crops that require a longer period for their development than lettuce. Two plantings should be made in the spring and one in the late summer, in order to have a supply for a considerable period.

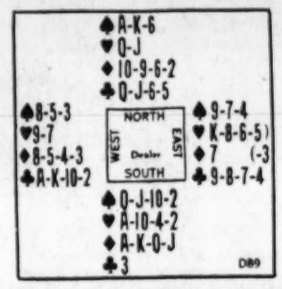
WORK ON BRIDGE

CONTRACT BRIDGE.

An interesting bidding situation turned up in a Duplicate Contract Tournament played during the month of May. The cards of the hand in question were distributed as follows:



At most of the tables it turned out that the result hinged to a great extent on South's initial bid. There were a few who disregarded the menace of the worthless singleton and bid No Trump. Their partners went to three and the game was played at that contract. They made their game but did not get near a slam-bid; had they gone that high, the Ace and King of Clubs in West's hand would have settled their fate.

Most of the South players, however, appreciated that a singleton (unless it be an Ace or King) is a serious No Trump menace and started by naming the Diamond suit.

Some Souths started by bidding two Diamonds and some one. Most of those who bid one had their partners shift to No Trumps and three No Trumps ended the bidding, but those who started with two Diamonds, showed thereby six tricks (the hand just qualified for that, as with the four Diamond tricks are the Ace of Hearts and the Queen-Jack-Ten of Spades), put their partners in a very different position. Facing that type of hand, the partners invariably jumped the Diamonds. In some cases, when unduly bold, they vaulted all the way to six. In other cases they went to five. When five was bid, the original bidder, as a rule, risked a six-bid so at almost every table where the initial bid was two Diamonds, the final bid was a small slam.

A glance at the composition of the hand shows that when it was played with Diamonds the trump, regardless of whether the bid was for a slam or not, twelve tricks could be taken. So the two-Diamond bidders scored a big gain over their rivals.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU.

"CANCER."

IF June 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a. m. to 9:15 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2:30 p. m., and 11 p. m. to midnight. The danger periods are from 4:30 a. m. to 5:30 a. m., and 4 p. m. to 6 p. m.

Astrological influences on this date will be mild in character, and there will be poor records for the day's history. Trouble in family affairs. Tantalizing setbacks due to effect of Saturn at this time of year.

The child born on this June 27 will have a very assimilative mind and will be quick to apprehend things. It will have gentle manners and a hopeful nature. It will have ability along business lines, will be quick at figures and will seek independence.

You are a delightful and an attractive person under proper conditions and surroundings, but you are a different being without your sustaining propps. Your morale is soon shattered when failure stares you in the face, and the bubbles of your enthusiasm soon burst when thrown against offending rocks. You lose hope and give up altogether too easily. You allow yourself to become paralyzed by false fears and you run away from harmless shadows. In the game of life, as in the game of bridge, there is no more certain loser than he who is afraid of taking risks. Your attitude courts disaster.

You are inclined to be so dominated by stronger personalities which may surround you that you do not know your own mind. you are not developing your latent ego to the fullest. History is packed with examples of men and women who by sheer self-development have made striking personalities of themselves. You can do the same!

The signs indicate that there will be an unusual attachment and a close association between a June 25 subject and his or her mother. Your greatest benefits will come directly or indirectly through her. You are extremely found of home and home comforts, and you will always cling to your childhood associations. You will not have many changes of residence. You should not shun society, as the association with the right sort of people will help to bring you out. Music has great charms for you.

Successful people born June 27:

Sir William Pepperell, first native American to be knighted.

Leonard Case, founder of Case School of Applied Science.

Dorman B. Eaton, lawyer, civil service reformer.

James S. Metcalf, managing editor of Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Paul Laurence Dunbar, poet and author.

SENATE COMMITTEE CONSIDERS HOLDING BUCKET SHOP INQUIRY

Cannon's school in Virginia. This being so, every movement in the Goldhurst case may be communicated to the interested party. This information should be, in some way, conveyed to the district attorney.'

"I think the proper way to call it to your attention is not to go outside and send any politicians to you, but send it to you directly. Just what is the reason that this man has not been tried and either convicted or exonerated? Is it because Bishop Cannon has been using his influence from Washington to have this case pigeon-holed, or is it because you have not the legal evidence to try him? If it is on account of Bishop Cannon's influence, it certainly is scandalous. If it is because you have not the legal evidence, in justice to Goldhurst, you should move for a dismissal of the indictment. But, in any case, this should not be pending in your court for fifteen or sixteen months.

"Will you kindly let me know what you are going to do about this indictment? * * *

"I suppose you are aware of the rumors in regard to this case. If you are not, you have not any good friends in the newspaper offices in New York, for every city editor knows that there are ugly rumors about this case, outside of Bishop Cannon's influence. Mr. Manley (Mr. Tuttle's first assistant) even knows the story about diamond bracelets, fur coats and automobiles. I am sure he must have informed you about the rumors. They may be only rumors, but they should be silenced, because it is not adding to the prestige of your office to have such rumors broadcast. I know of my knowledge that five or six newspaper reporters know about the story and that it came from Goldhurst himself. In fact, about the middle of October, Goldhurst himself told me the story in the outer office of a law office.

"Will you let me know whether this case is going to be put on the calendar and tried?"

Response by Tuttle.

Mr. Tuttle responded promptly. On the following day, October 3, 1929, he sent the following answer:

"I have your letter of the 2d instant. I had assumed that every one had known for a number of weeks that the Goldhurst case was to be tried this month, and that it would be tried by Mr. Robert E. Manley, first assistant United States attorney. These facts have been repeatedly stated by me to the representatives of the press.

"It is not the fact that there has been any delay about this case. The Postoffice inspectors have been steadily at work upon it and Mr. Manley has given practically the entire month of September exclusively to its preparation. We have desired to see that no line of investigation was left unexplored. Furthermore, Mr. Manley felt that the original indictment could be strengthened and broadened in a number of respects; and in consequence he sought and obtained a superseding indictment last month.

"In addition, you will no doubt have noticed from the public prints that in September this office caused the arrest of Mr. Goldhurst in connection with another financial operation, to wit: The Cosmopolitan Fiscal Corporation, and that upon his arraignment before the United States commissioner, I personally appeared and secured his being held in $20,000 bail.

Hits "Influence" Intimation.

"Nor does the fact that another case involving stock tipsters has lately been tried within several weeks after the indictment imply any ulterior motive in not trying the Goldhurst case before it. I presume you refer to the Wall Street Capital Bank case. In that case the defendants went to jail immediately after the indictment because they were unable to furnish bail; and a rule of the court very properly provides that cases where the defendants are actually in jail shall have a preference over all other criminal cases and shall be tried immediately.

"Additional judges for this district were appointed only a few months ago and the fall session of the court is just opening. We have been putting the vast number of cases in this office through 'the neck of the bottle' just as fast as they could be prepared and judges could be found to try them. Any innuendo that 'influence' may have been attempted is contradicted by the simple facts and is wholly unjustified."

Additional information on this subject, known to be in the hands of members of the Senate committee, is not available for publication at present.

THE GIRL IN THE AIR

BY JULIE ANNE MOORE

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS.

Janet Decker—Eighteen, with closely-cropped head of burnt gold and a pair of very large and very quizzical eyes. The flying secretary for

Richard C. Tolbert, president of the Great Eastern Air Transportation Co., and father of Dick Tolbert, an attractive young man who is an official for Great Eastern and who has told Janet he loves her and intends to marry her even though he is at present engaged to Helen Morgan, a society girl, who has just sailed for Europe.

Hugh Temple—An official and pilot for Great Eastern and the man who hired Janet. He is strangely missing along with a huge shipment of money which he was transporting to a New York bank. Janet doesn't believe he is guilty although the detectives and the Tolberts believe Temple himself stole the shipment. The plane has just been found in a nearby barn on Long Island and the fact that the ship had been carefully dismounted before being stowed in the barn argues strongly against Temple since only an experienced aviator could have done the job of dismantling so neatly. Temple had always displayed strong affection for the plane which he called "Susie."

Henry Frenda—A clerk in the office of Great Eastern and a friend of Janet's.

Belter—Office manager for Great Eastern.

Miss Sears—Dick Tolbert's secretary.

Tolbert Senior and Janet, accompanied by Dick as pilot, have flown to New York. A phone call awakens Janet in her room at the hotel. The call is for Tolbert Senior and a mysterious voice intimates that the caller has information about the missing money and Temple. Janet has the call traced and finds it comes from a nearby hotel. She tells a friendly bellboy she is going on the trail of a desperate criminal and rushes out to the nearby hotel. Arriving at the hotel, she sees three phone booths, each of which is occupied. She watches the three occupants leave, one by one, and notices that one of them has two fingers missing from one hand. She leaves the hotel, discouraged. Suddenly the friendly bellboy, who has followed her, shouts a warning: "Look out! One of them is behind you!" Janet wants to run, but stands rooted to the spot. She is seized from behind and a hand closes over her mouth. The hand has two fingers missing!

Meantime, Tolbert Senior and Dick are investigating things at the Long Island airport. On the way back, Tolbert Senior warns his son that it is unfair to show too much attention to Janet while he is engaged to another girl.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY!

CHAPTER XIII.

Henry Frenda came home from a rather gay party in the city to find his mother waiting up before the open hearth in the living room. A frail little woman, upon whose once pretty face the burdens of widowhood had left their mark, Mrs. Frenda sat with her face to the fire, her soft, gray eyes dimmed by reluctant tears.

"Kind of late, aren't you, son?" she asked, dabbing her eyes with a corner of her white apron. "It's almost 3 o'clock."

Henry, swaying slightly as he struggled out of his overcoat, crossed the room with uncertain step and dropped into a Windsor rocker opposite his mother. "Three o'clock's not late," he said shortly. "The party was just getting hot when I pulled out." He took up a short iron poker, shielded his eyes against the heat with one hand, and jabbed at the dying fire. "You haven't been waiting up for me, I hope," he said insolently.

Mrs. Frenda stirred uneasily, her worn hands clasped tightly in her lap. "I went to bed once," she said quietly; "but the telephone woke me up. Mr. Belter wants you to come up to the field."

"Tonight?" For the first time since entering the room he met his mother's hurt gaze. "He must be off his bat. Don't I put in enough time up there without meeting him at all hours of the night? . . . What time did he call?"

"It was five minutes after one when I answered the phone. He said it was very important and to tell you to come right up when you came in, no matter what time it was." She glanced up at the clock on the mantel, then dropped her eyes to the fire again. "Is anything wrong at the field, Henry?" she asked timidly.

"Of course not. Why?"

"I don't know. Mr. Belter's voice sounded kind of harsh and irritable, though. Made me think maybe you haven't been doing your work as well as you ought. . . . I hope you don't get to thinking too much about having a good time, son. If you lost your job we'd have a hard time of it, I'm afraid."

Henry got up and glared at his mother angrily. "Who said I haven't been doing my work? I've been doing more than my share for a long time and I'm getting good and tired of being nagged about it." He stamped over to the door, threw his cap on the back of his head and put an arm in his coat. "I don't know what difference it would make if I did lose my job. Old man Crell's paying you good money for board, isn't he?"

"What Mr. Crell pays me helps, Henry, but it isn't so much. Besides, we don't know when he's going to get through looking over timber around here and go off for good."

Henry lowered his voice and took a step toward his mother. "Is he in his room now?"

"He went to Boston again this morning while you were at the field," Mrs. Frenda told him. "Said he might be back tomorrow and he might not."

Henry pulled his coat collar up close about his neck and pulled a pair of heavy gloves from his pocket. "It's none of our business," he said in an undertone, "but I'm beginning to think there's something funny about Crell. Every letter he gives me to mail for him is addressed to New York, but every time he goes off, it's to Boston. Some of these times I'm going to open one of those letters and see what it's all about."

Mrs. Frenda jumped to her feet with surprising energy. "Henry . . . !"

But Henry had gone out and slammed the door behind him.

The airport operated on a 24-hour schedule, but it was unusual to find any one in the administration building at 4 o'clock in the morning.

When, therefore, Henry Frenda opened the door and interrupted a loud and angry discussion between Belter and Miss Sears, he was more than a little surprised.

Miss Sears nodded coldly. "I can only do so much work and no more, Mr. Belter," she said to the office manager in a low voice that contrasted oddly with the high, shrill tone that still rang in Henry's ears. "I've come back tonight to get off those letters for Mr. Tolbert because he insisted they had to be in the first mail in the morning. But I won't be loaded with anything else."

Belter said nothing. Nor did his expression suggest that he was particularly upset by this blunt refusal. He turned to Henry and said smoothly: "Some time ago I gave you a book to be delivered to the gentleman boarding at your house, Henry. I just learned yesterday that he had never received it."

Henry stared at the man in amazement. "You didn't get me up here at this hour to ask me that, Mr. Belter?"

Belter was like a small, pet dog suddenly grown vicious. "And why not?" he snapped. "You work for me, and you do what I say or get out. I gave you the book with instructions to give it to Mr.—er—Mr. Crell. You neglect your duty and Mr. Crell thinks I have forgotten my promise to send him a book on aviation. . . Where's the book?"

"Why—I forgot all about it," Henry lied. "I guess it's in the car. I remember putting it in the afternoon you gave it to me, but since you mention it, I don't remember taking it out."

"There!" said Belter, as if he had proved his case. "That is exactly what I supposed, and I meant to impress it upon you that such things must not be forgotten. . . . Is your car outside?"

The car was, in fact, outside, but Henry took a desperate chance. "No," he said. "I walked up. I'll look in it first-thing tomorrow morning."

The telephone on Belter's desk was ringing. "You'll look for it the moment you get home tonight," he corrected Henry sharply. "And be certain you bring it in tomorrow."

"You don't want me to give it to Mr. Crell?"

"You can't give it to Crell," Belter replied sarcastically as he went to answer the phone, "when Crell's in—in Boston. At least he told me a few days ago he expected to be in Boston over the week-end. Isn't he?"

Henry nodded.

"Hello. . . ." Belter glanced at Miss Sears and Henry. "Wait a minute," he shouted at the mouthpiece; "the connection's bad. I'll try another line. Hold the wire now." He turned to Miss Sears. "Will you put the receiver on the hook when I've had time to get the call on Temple's phone?" When Miss Sears nodded he went to the left wing of the building and closed the door behind him.

Henry walked toward the outside door. "He's sure in a fine mood," he said to Miss Sears. "You'd think that book was worth a million dollars."

Miss Sears favored him with a drab smile. "If Belter isn't careful," she said quietly, "some upstanding young man with spirit will tire of his insult and put him in his place. Go home and get some sleep, Henry, or he'll be after you tomorrow for sleeping on the job."

After the tedious ride from the field, Tolbert and Dick entered the hotel with but one thought: to get into bed as quickly as possible. Tolbert stopped at the desk for a moment, called goodnight to his son, and followed the boy to the elevator. Dick lingered over the register until he made certain that Janet had signed for all of them, and turned to follow his father.

"Pardon me, sir," the clerk called after him; "but are you with Mr. Tolbert and Miss Decker?"

"I am Tolbert, jr.," Dick told him wearily. "Miss Decker registered for the three of us, I think."

"Oh, yes; that's quite all right, sir, but I thought you ought to know about Miss Decker. She went out just before you gentlemtn came in the lobby."

Dick, puzzled, said: "Out? You mean she has gone out of the hotel at this hour? For what?"

"I don't know, sir. I saw her talking to one of the bellhops a few minutes ago; and all of a sudden she ran across the lobby and out in the street. I thought it was rather funny, but——"

"Why on earth should she run across the lobby? Where's the boy she was talking to?"

The clerk struck a small bell with his open palm. A boy in uniform sprang out of nowhere. "Tell Dowling to come to the desk at once," the clerk commanded. And then: "What's the trouble? Didn't you hear me?"

"I'm sorry, sir," the bellboy replied hesitantly, "but Dowling's not in. He went out the side entrance right after the lady had been talking to him in front of the desk here. Said he had to run up to Forty-fourth street for a minute."

The clerk was too outraged to speak. This was an unpardonable breach of discipline.

Dick said quickly: "Did you notice which way the young lady turned when she went out?"

"She turned right, sir," the boy answered. "I was on the door. She turned right and went off at a fast clip. Dowling couldn't of been more than half a square behind her."

"Then they both went in the same direction?"

"I think so, sir. Dowling said he was going up to Forty-fourth street, and that's the way the lady went. I can't be sure, of course, but that's——"

Dick left the boy talking. He walked rapidly out of the hotel and continued toward Forty-fourth street, his eyes aweeping both sides of the street as he went.

Midway the block he passed a policeman, strolling leisurely in the oposite direction. His first impulse was to ask the officer if he had seen a young lady and a bellhop go by, but on second thought he decided against it. There would be questions and, necessarily, explanation that he wasn't prepared to give, and an indefinite delay.

A taxi, cruising for drunks, pulled in close to the curb, the driver leaning out to hail the obviously sober young man on the sidewalk. Dick waved him away and hurried on.

A milk truck raced by and a small runabout, defying the law with an open cut-out, followed in its wake. A little woman with drooping shoulders came out of a dark doorway on the opposite side of the street and went off with dragging feet.

Within a few yards of Forty-fourth street Dick halted and cocked his head on one side. He could have sworn he had heard some one cry out; a high, frightened voice raised in fear. But now all was still and only the dull thud of unseen feet disturbed the quiet.

Suddenly alive, Dick leaped forward and turned into Forty-fourth street. Simultaneously there came to his ears a shrill, hysterical scream, and with it the sharp realization that tragedy had been, or was about to be, enacted under his very eyes.

Half way down the block the gaunt figure of a man and the slight figure of a woman struggled beside the open door of a machine. Between, a small boy in uniform was racing toward them.

In that instant Dick Tolbert, the civilized young gentleman, was changed into a savage of murderous hatred. Jaw set and fists clenched, he ran with lowered head, a maddened, charging animal bent upon the destruction of a fellow beast.

As if through a heavy mist, he saw the boy throw himself upon the brute of a man . . . saw the courageous little figure fall back limply and lie quiet on the sidewalk . . . saw the girl's head rudely forced into the open door of the car. . . .

And then—he said later it was as if a motion picture reel had abruptly gone into reverse—the man was jerking the girl back to the sidewalk and himself climbing into the front seat.

Even as Dick reached out to grasp the spare tire on the rear the machine shot forward, out of reach. A moment later it was a dozen yards away and gaining speed.

"Dick! . . . Dick!"

Janet's voice brought him back to his senses. He turned and ran toward her.

But she was waving him away. "Catch him, Dick! For God's sake catch him!"

He stood before her, breathless, too exhausted to explain that he was no match for a racing automobile; that after all her safety was all that mattered.

She screamed in his face: "For God's sake, catch him! Catch him!" And then, as he caught her to him and tried to quiet her. . . . "Oh, Dick, Dick! If you could only understand—he's got Hugh Temple in that car!"

WASHINGTON Votes Esso

We recently asked a thousand Washington motorists, picked at random, "What gasoline do you prefer?"

345 answered, "ESSO"—more than voted for any other gasoline or motor fuel sold in Washington at any price. And ESSO sells for 3 cents more a gallon than regular gasoline.

What a tribute to a product only 4 years old. Only one reason can explain the success of ESSO—and that is actual road performance in an automobile engine. Washington motorists have proved to themselves that ESSO is more powerful than any gasoline but costs no more by the mile. They know from actual experience that it has a lower knock rating.

More power, no knocks and all 'round efficiency tell why ESSO outsells and outperforms every rival.

That's what ESSO will prove to you. Test ESSO today on power or anti-knock value. See for yourself that there's a difference you can really feel between ESSO and any other gasoline at any price in Washington.

How to Keep Well

NEW NAMES OF OLD ILLS.

MRS. W. B. B. writes: Will you please write something on treatment of weeping eczema and also suggest diet for the patient? Is milk taboo?

REPLY.

The term eczema bids fair to go into the discard along with the terms catarrh and ptomaine poisoning—not because it or either of them has gone out of existence, but because new and better names have been found. The old eczema was a group of skin diseases due to a variety of causes. Catarrh has become sinusitis, and ptomaine poisoning is split into various kinds of food poisoning.

Weeping eczema is a form of chronic dermatitis or inflammation of the skin which is characterized by oozing. In most cases, when the affected person is an adult, the chronic oozing dermatitis is the result of poisoning of the skin by something which touches it. To cure it, the search should be, not for a salve to apply, but for a cause to remove. Poisoning of the skin by reason of the exposures of occupations is the most frequent cause. The severest form of it is poison ivy; in fact, this form of eczema is so irritating and unpleasant that we do not think of it as weeping eczema at all. And yet, its only departure from the requirements of the eczema picture is its severity. Various plants and many woods are like poison ivy in that they can produce dermatitis — milder, however, than that due to rhus. Exposure to soap, to water, to various articles used in the home, the office and on the farm can cause it. It may be caused by chemicals used to dye gloves and clothing generally.

Obviously, not much can be expected from changing the food if the eczema be due to occupation. Experimenting with eczema salves is just as profitable, and no more so. However, some cases in adults are caused by foods. It is the children who suffer especially from food eczemas. Tetter or cradlecap in milk-fed babies is a good illustration. Among them milk is frequently at fault.

If a case is caused by milk, and the affected person is an adult, milk should be dropped from the diet. It may be necessary to drop all foods made with milk or made from milk. If the affected person is a young baby the problem is more difficult. In some cases it is advisable to continue using milk until the baby passes into the second year, wrestling with the latter as well as one can. In others, milk must be dropped and an effort made to find a substitute.

As you see, decision as to change in diet must await the answer to other questions.

NATS BEAT TIGERS, 12-4; KEEP PACE WITH LEADERS

Pegler

EVERY now and again some skeptic pities me on account of my credulity in the matter, but, much as I would like to know, I never have been able to decide whether Paavo Nurmi was the greatest deceiver in amateur athletics or a great patriot to his little fatherland, Finland. He came to this country in the second or third class accommodations of a mediocre ship in the winter of 1924-'25. He broke all the world records for conventional and unconventional distances from 1 mile to 3 miles. He turned down an offer of $40,000 from the late Tex Rickard, and he finally returned to Finland, traveling first-class this time, but not in luxury, the most mysterious character in all sport.

Nurmi was a man that nobody knew, but whether he was studiously haughty and really wished to snub the press, the public and his sporting adversaries or merely was so arranged that publicity and the amenities did not exist for him one could only guess. The newspapers of every big city in the United States put reporters on him, but none of them spoke Finnish, and when they went after him with interpreters he spoke only in taciturn grunts, which the interpreters would elaborate into long and obviously imaginative discourses.

Creates His Own Publicity.

There was a moderate tootle of ballyhoo, by no means amounting to a blast, at the time he sailed for the United States, but it did not take him long to create his own publicity. Soon after he landed in the United States he ran in New York one night, in Chicago the next night and in New York again the third night, and broke the world record for the distance involved each time.

His trainer and public sponsor was Hugo Quist, a sly man, who always seemed to imply that he could a tale unfold, and who afterward took up with Charlie Pyle to massage and coach some of Charlie's grotesquely whiskered and bedraggled bunioneers on their serio-comic chase across the continent. One night, long after Paavo had returned to Finland, I asked Mr. Quist whether he was now willing to say as to Paavo's amateurism, but although the circumstances were such as to loosen the tongue and relax the vigilance of one guarding a secret, he only looked at the ceiling a while and then, with a quizzical smile, replied: "Anyway, he could run."

Determined to Run For Finland.

If Paavo had been a professional amateur of the type familiar to lawn tennis would he have been content to go on deriving his pay from padded expense bills to a total of only a few thousand dollars and then turn down a competency? The alternative seemed to me to be that Paavo was a patriotic Finn, running for the glory of his country and determined to remain an amateur, so he could run for Finland again in the Olympic games.

He might have insisted upon a suite at a great hotel and carte blanche to entertain his friends, as the professional amateurs have been known to do, but Paavo lived in the household of an obscure family of his countrymen in the Bronx.

There was a story about in those days to the effect that Paavo and Willie Ritola, another Finn, living in New York and running for the Finnish-American A. C., were enemies.

Ritola, a spunky runner with a gangling get-along on the track, was

CORNELL SURPRISES, BEATING FAVORITES IN ANNUAL REGATTA

Syracuse Second and M. I. T. Is Third in Crew Classic.

Washington Far Back Navy Swamped at Poughkeepsie.

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor).

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 26 A.P.).—Shades of Old Man River, Old Pop Courtner and the rowing glory that is again Cornell's.

In one of the most spectacular, dramatic comebacks the Hudson has ever known, Cornell's big red crew made a show of the greatest fleet in intercollegiate regatta history this afternoon, winning the 4-mile varsity race for the first time in fifteen years to rule again the waves that the Ithacans dominated so long in the balmy days of the late Charles E. (Pop) Courtney.

Stroked by a 19-year-old sophomore, Robert M. Wilson, of Montclair, N. J., pacing the first big college race of his career as a substitute, Cornell fought off a smashing challenge by Syracuse to win by three good lengths. Over the critical last mile the Ithacans rowed like champions every foot of the way as they captured a roughtwater battle that saw the dope scattered all over the river and furnished the thrilling climax to a succession of dizzy upsets.

Cornell took command of the varsity race shortly before the halfway mark was reached, after the surprising Massachusetts crew, competing in the regatta for the second time, had set a sensational pace from the start. From the 2-mile mark on Cornell shook off M. I. T. and was unchallenged except by Syracuse for the rest of the long route, drawing away from the gallant Orange boatload in the last mile.

Favorite After Favorite Drops Out.

Back in the ruck, splashing and fighting through water that was almost as rough as the heavy seas of 1929, favorite after favorite dropped out of the running after a mile and a half of racing that left the race as open as the broad reaches of the river.

Massachusetts Tech, hanging on gamely, finished third, six lengths behind Syracuse but two good lengths ahead of California, which finished fourth. Two lengths behind the Golden Bears came Columbia, 1929 champions, in fifth place, with Washington, hitherto unbeaten and the outstanding favorite of the entire fleet, finishing sixth. The Huskies were three lengths in fornt of Pennsylvania, which in turn had a length and a half over Wisconsin.

Trailing as they shipped a big load of water over the last mile and a half, the highly-touted Naval Academy Eight, favorite of the East, gave up the struggle when within a furlong of the finish. Slowly the Middie shell sank as old man river again exacted a heavy toll among the leading contenders.

Cornell, outriding the waves and outrowing all rivals, not only lifted the blue ribbon prize of the regatta for the first time since 1915, but came within a few seconds of actually sweeping the river as the Ithacans divided the first two races of the re-

Yankees Defeat Indians In Orgy of Clouts, 13-11

New York, June 26 (A.P.)—The Yankees presented Herb Pennock with his seventh victory of the season today and the pitching leadership of the American League by outslugging the Cleveland Indians to win the series opener, 13 to 11.

Pennock was unsteady at times and finally was removed in the eighth inning, but the Yanks had piled up too big a lead for Cleveland to overcome. Five of the Cleveland runs off Pennock were results of home runs. Seeds and Hodapp each hit one with a man on base and Averill did the trick with empty bases.

MACKS BEAT BROWNS BY 8 TO 3

Gray Clouted as Simmons Leads Attack; Homer for Foxx.

PHILADELPHIA, June 26 (A.P.).—Sam Gray was easy for his old teammates today, the Athletics beating the St. Louis Browns in the opening game of the four-game series here by a score of 8 to 3.

The Mackmen pounded Gray for thirteen hits, eight of which were for extra bases. Four of the long wallops were counted in the sixth inning, when Bishop and Cochrane doubled, Simmons tripled and Foxx hit his nineteenth home run of the year. This demonstration shot the champions ahead for the balance of the game.

TIGERS FACE CROWDER TODAY

Johnson Looks Over Rookies; Shires Is Ready for Duty.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

BUCKY HARRIS and his Tigers are here again today and the usual large "Ladies and Boy Scout Day" crowd is expected to be on hand. Having extended their winning streak to six in a row yesterday, the Nats are out today for number 7, which carries with it the series edge even though they drop tomorrow's fracas. The task of doing the flinging against the heavy-hitting Jungle Cats will be assigned to "General" Alvin Crowder, with Charley Sullivan likely opposing him.

Crowder has hurled exceptional ball since he returned to Washington livery as part of the deal which sent Goose Goslin to the Browns. He was beaten by his former teammates in St. Louis when he drew the assignment the day after he was traded, but pitched good ball, nevertheless. Since then, the "General" has beaten Chicago and Cleveland in his only two other 1930 starts as a Nat and he has gone the route on both occasions, although it looked as though the Tribe had him on the verge of a knockout in the first game of Monday's double-header.

Any hope of the Nats landing Infielder Sammy Hale from the Browns via the waiver route was dissipated when it was learned last night that, rather than strengthen the Johnson's in their pennant drive, the St. Louis Club withdrew Hale's name from the market.

Johnson Looks Over Rookies.

Among the several promising rookies who were out for trials for the Nats yesterday were John Fitzgerald, a good fielding first baseman, and Jim Boswell, a right-handed

7 RUNS IN OPENING INNING CLINCH 6TH STRAIGHT TRIUMPH

SIXTH STRAIGHT

Two Detroit Hurlers Pounded for Total of 17 Safeties.

Marberry Scatters 10 Hits; Myer, Harris, Manush Star.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

HOPPING on the slants of Earl (Dapper Dan) Whitehill in the first round and pounding the little southpaw off the hill with seven runs over and only one man out, it was a very simple matter for the Nationals to turn in their sixth straight victory yesterday and thus keep pace with their nearest rivals, the first-place Mackmen and the third-place Yankees, who also turned in triumphs.

The Johnsons were not satisfied with a paltry seven runs, however, scoring five more off of Arthur (Kippered) Herring, relief flinger, before the end to bring the final score to 12 to 4.

Fred Marberry did the flinging for the natives, pulling something of an "iron man" stunt by coming back to the races after having worked and won against the Indians not farther back than last Monday. Given a commanding lead by his mates, he did not have to travel at full speed, but, even while letting down much of the time, the best the Tigers could do was to knick his offerings for ten hits, their biggest inning being the eighth, which netted four hits and a brace of markers.

Two Homers in Game.

Two homers were poled during the pastime, Catcher Tony Rensa lashing one just over the barrier in left-center in the fifth, which looked like quite a poke until Dave Harris came to bat in the eighth. With Cronin on second, the Greensboro sheriff met one of Herring's offerings full in the face, and this blow made that of Rensa look puny by comparison. The ball landed fully halfway up in the stands in left-center.

This was Harris' third safety of the day and gave him stick honors, with Myer next, with a triple, double and single, and Manush also deserving mention by virtue of the three singles credited him. "Chubby" Fothergill, with a double and two singles in three times up, showed the way to the Tigers.

Washington's first inning really tells the story of the game. Whitehill has always been a puzzle to the Nats and, despite the fact that they knocked him off the hill in Detroit on their last trip, the announcement that he was due to pitch was not greeted by them with any cheers. He proved to have "nothing but a prayer," as the players say, and the way the Nats hopped on him at the start was most refreshing to the 4,000 fans on hand.

Myer Opens With Triple.

Myer opened with a triple and then followed in rapid order singles by Rice, Manush and Cronin, walks to Harris and Judge, the latter forcing home a run, Bluege's sacrifice fly, and another pass to Ruel. Three errors also had been contributed and the Nats had scored all of their seven runs by the time Manager Bucky Harris decided to send Herring to the hill. Myer greeted the newcomer with his second safety of the inning before the relief flinger could put out the fire.

The Tigers were unable to break the ice until the fourth when Rice's error on Fothergill's double let Gehringer, who had opened with a walk, score. This run was gotten back in the home half on Manush's opening single, a bunt which he beat out, and Cronin's triple to the scoreboard. The "San Francisco Keed" tried to stretch this into a homer, but was nipped by quite a margin on Gehringer's good relay of the return throw.

Rensa came through with his four-base clout in the fifth and the Nats waited until the next frame, when they countered with a two-run splurge, the result of Myer's opening double and Fothergill's error on it, singles by Manush and Harris, and a double theft by the latter pair, with

IN THE WAKE OF THE GAME

FIRST BASEMAN JOE JUDGE started his first game for the Nationals yesterday since he came down with a Charley horse attack in Cleveland on June 9. Manager Johnson also decided upon another shift, moving Rice to center and starting Harris in right. This move was made because the latter has shown more hitting power than Loepp, who previously has been alternating with West.

Outfielder Funk's return throw after catching Bluege's sacrifice fly in the first took a bad bound and split Catcher Hayworth's upper lip, making it necessary for him to give way to Rensa.

Stone lost Myer's opening drive in the sun and it went for a triple, as Buddie broke speed records rounding the paths in the heat. Coming up for the second time in the frame, the Nat second-sacker singled to right.

When Whitehill walked Judge in the first, forcing home a run, it was the third marker scored by the Nats in this manner in two days, as two were crowded off third via the four-ball route in Wednesday's game with the Indians.

Myer went over back of second to make a nice stop and peg of Alexander's hot grasser opening Round 2.

Joe Judge's father is here so as to be on hand for tomorrow's "Judge day" ceremonies, when the Nat captain will be honored by the fans in appreciation of his fifteen years' service in Washington livery.

"Fats" Fothergill, who made quite a record for himself as a pinch hitter last year, has not been particularly good this season while representing a mate at the tee. When he doubled, while up for Stone in the fourth, it was his first pinch hit of 1930.

Joe Cronin surely was running for a new suit of clothes in the home fourth when he tried to stretch his clout to the score board into a home run. Gehringer's good relay of Johnson's return peg nipped him by a goodly margin, however.

Usually first sackers are kept quite busy, but Alexander yesterday did not get credit for a putout until Mc-

ROMANY BAW SCORES WASHINGTON PARK FEATURE

Claim of Foul Disallowed By Judges

Supreme Sweet and Winner Swerve in Stretch.

Fator Rides Ladana to Victory in Feature at Aqueduct.

WASHINGTON PARK, Chicago, June 26 (A.P.).—Romany Baw, owned by the Greentree Stable, was returned the winner in the Thomas Hotel Purse today at Washington Park in a rough and exciting race, and after a claim of foul in behalf of R. W. Selden's Supreme Sweet had been disallowed. Supreme Sweet was second and the race was strictly between these two. Panchio was third. The 6 furlongs were run over a heavy and holding track.

Romany Baw took the lead at the start, closely followed by Supreme Sweet. In the stretch Supreme Sweet overhauled Romany Baw and showed in front for an instant. Both horses swerved, Supreme Sweet bearing in and Romany Baw out, bumping several times. Romany Baw, apparently least affected by this, continued to win by two lengths. Jockey Carl Meyer rode the winner.

Oscar Laidley, who rode Supreme Sweet, went to the judges' stand to lodge his complaint, while some of the crowd cheered, but his claim was not allowed. Romany Baw was second choice in the betting and paid $8.04 for each $2 ticket.

Ladana Wins

At 8 to 1.

Aqueduct Race Track, June 26 (A.P.).—The Rancocas Stable came into their own when Ladana, with Laverne Fator in the saddle, was an easy winner of the Clover Stakes here today. The Wheatley Stable's Brusher was second and Dark Magnet third. The winner was backed down from 20 to 8 to 1 at the close and it was a real old-fashioned Rancocas killing.

A very peculiar incident occurred in the paddock just before the fillies went to the post. Tom Healey was tightening the girth on Summer Day, one of the H. P. Whitney starters, when she suddenly reared and fell backward, striking a pillar. She had a very bad hemorrhage and frantic efforts were made to save her. She was withdrawn from the race. Summer Day, coupled with Gosling, were one of the choices, but when the accident occurred the betting shifted to the G. D. Widener entry, Sovietta and Stefana, who were made odds-on choices.

The field got away to a good start and the field ran well bunched to the elbow, where Ladana was sent to the front. Ladana, showing excellent speed, drew away from the field to win rather handily by two lengths. Brusher beat Dark Magnet a length for the place. The race was worth $6,600.

Boots and Saddle's

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office.)

—Washington Park Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

WASHINGTON PARK today offers the Homewood Stakes as the feature, which has attracted the best field of sprinters brought to the barrier in a fortnight. The track being muddy, CAYUGA appears to have a good chance and will be at long odds. T. S. JORDAN, at the distance, appears the contender, although his last race was a bad one. GOLDEN PRINCE is another mudder which will figure in the race.

Although this is a handicap, the weights are very light, ranging from 101 pounds up to the top of 112, which CAYUGA and some of the others carry. The field is very evenly matched. GREENOCH and CLUB HOUSE both have a chance. DONNAY will make his first start in some time, but will have to show something before he regains a following. He is better at a distance.

FIRST RACE—CHATTERBLACK is a good mudder and is selected to win the first race, a claiming event. NIFTY may be the contender. MARY'S TOY should be in the money. FOREIGN BET, which failed a few days ago, can do better. CHATTERBLACK beat some good fields in the East in the mud.

SECOND RACE is for maiden 2-year-olds. The Greentree Stable has an entry of two, SPAR and CHUCKLING. SPAR has run one good race which suggests improvement in the mud and this seems a good spot for the juvenile to graduate. FLAG PORTER is not a bad prospect, and has a good chance to be second. HOMER L. is part of an entry that will have a following and is selected for show money.

THIRD RACE—RUANE should win. He won his last start from a similar field. It would not be wise to rely too much on the horse's consistency. The track condition suits. APT is a very good plater and should be the runner-up. CORAL BEACH has a chance for the front money, but third will be the more probable finish.

FOURTH RACE—Among the 2-year-olds in the fourth BROWN-EYED MARY should be considered. She has beaten better fields than this one. ZEBRA is a mudder and is regarded as the contention. BEIGE may go well and should get third.

SIXTH RACE—ONUP has the edge in the sixth race, with BLACK ON WHITE, the contender. UNITED ARMY will like the distance of a mile and a quarter. ONUP is the better mudder and carries only 100 pounds.

SEVENTH RACE—Is very similar to the sixth in class of horses. MASTER ACE is picked to win the race, which is also at a mile and a quarter, and will meet a dangerous mudder in FADDY. PETER is next best of the field, but he has been racing far below his form. He should get third money.

Yankee Girl II First In Race to Bermuda

Bermuda, June 26 (A.P.).—G. W. Warren's New York-owned schooner, Yankee Girl II, was the first of the fleet of boats that set sail from New London last Sunday in the 600-mile race to Bermuda to cross the finish line today. The schooner Fame, the scratch boat of the race and owned by J. D. Thompson, of White Plains, N. Y., was second with J. G.

Gallant Fox Is 3-to-5 Choice for Saturday

New York, June 26 (A.P.).—Gallant Fox and Whichone—the natural of the 1930 turf season—will meet again Saturday in what promises to be nothing more than another opportunity for the Fox to reassert his claim to the 3-year-old championship.

The occasion for the second meeting of the two outstanding 3-year-olds of the year will be the Dwyer Stakes at Aqueduct, run over 1½ miles—the same distance at which William Woodward's star defeated the Harry Payne Whitney ace by four lengths in the Belmont Stakes at Belmont Park two weeks ago.

Earl Sande, recovering from a twisted ankle, will be aboard the son of Sir Gallahad III to keep the combination that won the Preakness, Kentucky Derby and Belmont intact. Up on Whichone will be Linus (Pony) McAtee, replacing Sonny Workman, the East's ranking jockey of 1930, who has ridden Whichone in his past races. The change is an experiment.

Whereas Whichone was the 3-to-5 favorite when the pair met at Belmont Park, Gallant Fox will go to the post the public choice Saturday at approximately the same odds.

BLACK FLYER headed MISS LEE at end of first quarter and drew into second place, but tired in final issue. MISS LEE had early speed and was in the lead nearing the far turn, where she lost the lead to BLACK FLYER and tired, but held on fairly well. PAGAN LADDIE went evenly. NORA D. broke outside starting gate and sulked. BROKEN SOUND quit after showing a flash of early speed. CHARM disliked the going.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SISTER MARY, $32.20, $12.72, $5.38; DRY DOCK, $5.34, $3.02; TAN FACE, $2.74.

SISTER MARY raced into contention right after start and, holding on in closest pursuit of DRY DOCK to stretch, came inside but, closing resolutely, wore down and outfinished DRY DOCK for the lead. DRY DOCK had much the early speed, keeping a safe lead to stretch, outgamed the tiring TAN FACE. TAN FACE closed a gap in early part, reached contention and, coming fast on outside in stretch, loomed up threateningly, but faltered under pressure, swerving badly. THE DUKE saved ground, but never could get up. FLY'G CHEROKEE and TRAP STAR tired.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:29. Off at 3:33. Winner, O. L. Foster's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOMMY LAD, $18.54, $7.28, $3.70; WATER LAD, $2.62; CHRISTIE FLANAGAN, $2.62.

TOMMY LAD, always close to pace, made his run entering stretch and, after disposing of CHRISTIE FLANAGAN, drew away strongly and won as rider pleased. WATER LAD raced sluggishly first half mile, then began gaining, but lost much ground in the stretch and was unable to get to winner. CHRISTIE FLANAGAN had speed, saved ground on inside, but was in the worst part of the track and tired. THE OKAH showed improvement and raced fairly well. JESSIE CAREY and JAGUAR had no mishaps.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Dandelion. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Time, 0:25 at 4:01. Off at 4:01½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZAILA, $6.08, $3.64, out; AL FAYEB, $5.18, out; CHICAGO GIRL, out.

ZAILA, away well, followed the pace closely, moving up with a strong rush entering the stretch, headed leader in driving out to win in a canter. AL FAYEB had early speed and, despite racing wide, came again in the final eighth, getting up to outfinish CHICAGO GIRL. CHICAGO GIRL raced forwardly on the inside and, closing with good courage, outlasted BEAUTIFUL DOLL. BEAUTIFUL DOLL made a fast move entering the stretch, loomed up strongly, but tired at the end. CLELA was outrun.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,400. The Thomas Hotel. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:32. Off at 4:33. Winner, Greentree Stable's blk. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROMANY BAW, $8.04, $2.94, out; SUPREME SWEET, $2.56, out; PANCHIO, out.

ROMANY BAW, going in best form, set a good pace to the stretch, weakened slightly to lose lead to SUPREME SWEET an eighth away but, coming again courageously and despite Laidley's bumping tactics, outgamed SUPREME SWEET. SUPREME SWEET, always in closest pursuit, forced the pace, headed ROMANY BAW midway of stretch, drew in, bumping ROMANY BAW and SUPREME SWEET weakened in final rush. PANCHIO closed considerable ground from slow beginning, but could not get to winners. SQUABBLER began fast, but immediately dropped out of contention.

CHARIOT, much the best, was restrained off the pace for the first half mile, but moved up to the leaders with a rush entering the stretch and, coming strongly, wore down and easily beated NEGODALE. NEGODALE closed wide gap in first six furlongs, took a safe lead entering the stretch, but was no match for the winner in the drive. JEAN LAFITTE gained gradually from a slow beginning, closed an immense gap and made a game finish. OUTPOST closed in fast in final quarter to outfinish tiring horses. LAWYER had early speed, but faltered when the real racing came.

ACCOUNT, under strong restraint first five furlongs, moved up determinedly when called upon entering the stretch and, coming to the outside, wore down HERNAN CORTES, drew clear and won in hand. CABILDO began slowly but, working up gradually, closed a big gap and, coming fast at end, outgamed HERNAN CORTES. Latter opened up a long lead, but weakened in the stretch. DUBRIC, far back first six furlongs, closed ground in the final quarter. COME ON, a factor to the stretch turn, quit badly.

LOTT AND DOEG IN TWO VICTORIES AT WIMBLEDON

U. S. Net Aces Advance in England

Mary Greef Is Lone American to Bow in Day's Play.

Tilden and Partners Advance in Two Divisions.

By FRANK H. KING.

WIMBLEDON, England, June 26 (A.P.).—A mixed fare of doubles and women's singles was served Wimbledon's tennis crowds today, with the Americans maintaining the pace that swept their stars through the early rounds of the singles competition.

With British nobility and Bobby Jones, "the king of the golf world, looking on from the royal box, the invaders from across the Atlantic swept through seven doubles and two singles matches. Miss Mary Greef, of Kansas City, was the only American to be eliminated, the youthful American star falling before Miss S. Payot, Swiss champion, 6—4, 6—3.

Jones, who is no less a diplomat than a golfer, said it was his first view of big-time tennis and he thought it a great game. After his experiences at St. Andrews and Hoylake, Bobby was a little envious of the tennis stars, who do their stuff with the galleries safely caged in grand stands, the players needing no police protection.

Miss Elizabeth Ryan, who has been winning women's and mixed doubles titles at Wimbledon for the last fifteen years, appeared in two matches with all her stroke unimpaired. Taking on Mlle. Josane Sigart, Belgium's ranking star, in one of the few singles matches played today, Miss Ryan won, 8—3, 6—4.

Belgian Player Starts Well.

The Belgian player started well against the American veteran, who makes her home in England, leading 3 to 1 in the first set, mainly by keeping her opponent back with well-placed drives. Miss Ryan drew level, however, by pounding the Belgian girl's forehand. Having faltered, Mlle. Sigart faded rapidly, as Miss Ryan took the second set with ease.

Miss Ryan also partnered with Mrs. Helen Moody in two love sets against Mrs. V. Burr and Miss G. N. Thompson, of Great Britain. The young English girls were not of championship type, but still they packed sufficient power to indicate that Mrs. Moody, backed up by Miss Ryan's great experience and fine doubles play, is likely to add the 1930 doubles to her string of Wimbledon titles. Mrs. Moody and Miss Ryan won the title in 1927, while previously Miss Ryan had won five years running with Suzanne Lenglen and four years with various other partners.

The American domination of the women's singles continued, when Miss Helen Jacobs went into the fourth round, winning a 6—3, 6—0 decision over Miss Stanley, of Great Britain. As both Miss Ryan and Miss Jacobs are in the same half of the draw, they may meet in the semifinal round.

Doeg and Lott Win Twice.

Although forced to play their best tennis, Johnny Doeg and George Lott, the United States doubles champions, came through with two matches today to lead the American men in their parade toward the English championships. Lott and Doeg first defeated V. A. Cazalet and J. C. Masterman, of England, 8—6, 13—11, 7—5, and then returned to the courts later in the day to eliminate F. R. L. Crawford and G. E. M. de St. Croix of the India Team, in five-hard-fought sets. The scores were 6—0, 4—6, 6—4, 5—7, and 6—3.

Johnny Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, members of the United States Davis Cup Team, opened the defense of their Wimbledon title by disposing of E. C. Metcalf and A. W. Vinall, 6—2, 6—3, 6—0. Berkeley Bell, the Texan, and Gregory Mangin, Newark, N. J., youth, paired together to defeat Count Von Salm Hoogstraaten of Austria and Burr, of England, 7—5 6—4 6—4.

Tilden Advances in Two Divisions.

Big Bill Tilden also advanced in two divisions of play but in each case he was paired with a foreign partner, together with H. Timmer, Holland's ranking player, Big Bill defeated R. Deyerding and J. R. Reddall, of England, 6—h, 8—6, 6—2. The American ace then teamed with his German partner, Fraulein Cilli Aussem, to win in the mixed doubles, defeating F. J. Perry and Miss M. Heeley, of England, 6—1, 6—4.

The Italian team of Baron H. L. de Morpurgo and P. Gaslini eliminated E. H. McCauliffe, an American student, and his English partner, S. W. Harris, 7—5, 6—0, 6—2. Miss Ermyntrude Harvey, veteran British player, lost her match with Mrs. C. G. McIlquham, also of England, when she collapsed on the court during the third set, the scores were, 2—6, 8—6, 4—2. Miss Betty Nuthall, 19-year-old British star, defeated Mrs C. H. Jameson, 6—4, 6—3.

The center court program tomorrow brings together the youthful Mangin and the equally as youthful English star, H. W. Austin. Mrs. Moody is scheduled to continue her singles play against Miss M. Canters, of Holland, while Lott and Miss Jacobs continue the mixed doubles competition, meeting P. D. B. Spence and Betty Nuthall—an all-English combination. Allison matches strokes with G. P. Hughes, while Doeg meets H. F. David on court one.

Warrenton Baseball Fans to Honor Judge

Special to The Washington Post.

Warrenton, Va., June 26.—Fifty fans will leave Warrenton Saturday morning for American League Park, Washington City, to do honor to Joe Judge, the National's famous first baseman, who for fifteen years has guarded the initial sack. The Warrentonians have reserved a block of fifty seats back of first base. They have also raised a "pot of gold" for Joe, which they will present to him.

Joe Judge, once, together with Walter Johnson and Sam Rice, played in Warrenton and with Warrenton against the barnstorming Phillies; this was in 1928 and Warrenton never forgot this trio.

This incidentally was the last game of ball ever pitched by Walter Johnson, in an actual contest, for the next day he signed his contract to manage Newark.

Radio Play-by-Play Slated for Open Golf

New York, June 26 (A.P.).—A stroke-by-stroke description of play by leading contenders in the last two hours of the final eighteen holes in the national open golf tournament Minneapolis, is to go on the air over the Columbia Broadcasting System on the afternoon of July 12.

Plans announced today provide for the use of a portable short-wave transmitter strapped to the back of the announcer, Ted Husing, who will follow the players from hole to hole.

Heretofore golf matches have been broadcast with fixed observers at one or two strategic points. With the use of the portable short-wave apparatus, which will send to a receiver located in the clubhouse and which in turn will be connected to the network, detailed close-ups will be possible.

The play by play will be broadcast from 5 to 7 p. m. (Eastern standard time) July 12 while on July 10 and 11 Husing will give a synopsis of the day's results.

Victory Post Wins Protest; League Lists Close Monday

UPHOLDING the protest made by the Victory Post Nine, E. B. Lyons, athletic officer for the Department of the District of Columbia, American Legion, last night ordered the game played between the Spengler and Victory teams in the American Legion baseball series last Sunday replayed. Spengler Post won the game, 3 to 1.

The decision of the athletic officer wipes the lone defeat from the record of the Victory Team and also removes one of the victories credited the Spengler Post team.

In filing its protest, Victory Post claimed that decisions rendered during the game by Umpire Tommy David were not in accord with the official rules.

Victory Post now has two victories and no defeats to its credit. Spengler has one victory and one defeat. Sergt. Jasper Post, with three wins in as many starts, is setting the pace for the title contenders.

By mutual agreement, managers of teams engaged in the Montgomery County section championship race of the Capital City League, additional players may be signed until next Monday at midnight. After that hour no players may be added to the rosters of the six teams.

Player lists of the District, Unlimited, Senior, Junior, Midget, Insect and Peewee classes of the Capitay City League will also close Monday at midnight. Rosters of the Prince Georges County and Virginia sections closed on June 15.

UPSET RACE IS WON BY CORNELL

Syracuse Is Second, M. I. T. Third in Surprises.

gatta with their Upstate rival, Syracuse.

Cornell scored a smashing victory in the 3-mile junior varsity race, beating the favored Washington javees by five and one-half lengths, and Syracuse captured the 2-mile freshman honors, with Cornell in second place two lengths behind.

Back in the days of Courtney, Cornell had the habit of sweeping the river, but they came closer today to turning this remarkable trick against the finest of American crews than any day since their triple conquest in 1912.

It has been ten years since the Ithacans scored even a double victory.

Trailing Cornell, and Washington in the junior varsity race, were Columbia, Syracuse, Pennsylvania and Navy. In the freshman event, behind Syracuse and Cornell, came Columbia, Pennsylvania, Washington, California, Navy and Massachusetts Tech.

In these two preliminaries, the two up-State New York universities repeated conquests of 1929. The duel they waged all by themselves in the closing stages of the varsity race made it a great day for their partisans, a remarkable tribute to their coaches, Jim Wray, of Cornell, and 80-year-old Jim Tennyeck, of Syracuse, as well as a brilliant triumph for Eastern oarsmanship.

For the last nine years, only "Young Dick" Glendon and his gallant Columbians, "Old Dick" Glendon and the Navy have been able to check the onrush of Far Western rowing skill.

Crowd of 50,000 On Hand.

Today a crowd of upward of 50,000 spectators came out to pack the shores, the observation train, and an impressive fleet of boats, in anticipation of another great bid for honors by these rugged boys from California and Washington. Instead, they stayed to cheer Cornell's magnificent comeback and see the two Western outfits' victims along with the Navy, of a smashing series of upsets and the rough treatment of Old Man River.

Washington, favorite in the javee event, was soundly whipped by Cornell, and even more convincingly beaten in the varsity struggle after finishing fifth in the freshman event. man race, more than a length be-

California was sixth in the freshhind their rivals, but gained some revenge over the huskies by taking fourth place in the, varsity battle, more than four lengths in front of the Washington crew that had beaten the Golden Bears for the Pacific Coast championship.

From the outset of an exciting battle the advance dope was spilled as the rugged M. I. T. crew in its trim, black shell shot out into the lead over a flock of favorites. Navy perhaps held a slight edge for the first few hundred yards, due to a perfect getaway, but the Tech Engineers were out in front after a half mile and they had an open-water advantage over the field at the mile mark.

For this start of the route Navy, Washington, California and Columbia, all figured very much in the racing, were blanketed. Cornell, off somewhat raggedly, nevertheless was the first to challenge Tech, and when the big Red crew, with its new and comparatively inexperienced young stroke oar, Wilson, went out in front just short of the two-mile mark, they stayed out there.

Cornell Has "Lucky" No. 2 Lane.

Rowing in the No. 2 lane, that in the past has been so traditionally lucky as to the known as the "rabbit's foot," position, Cornell swung into a steady, consistent, 30-to-minute beat that proved increasingly effective as the race went on. It must have been a severe test for Wilson around the half-way mark, as Cornell fought for and gained its first advantage, but the youngster met it as though he had been rowing a boat most of his life. The fact that he had been just a substitute heretofore shoved into the varsity boat to replace the commodore, H. C. Shoemaker, because of the latter's illness, did not seem to bother this pace setter, the youngest of any in the race. Wilson's main distinction in college previously had been to be elected president of the dramatic society, and perhaps his appreciation of the dramatic had something to do with the way he put his back and arms into every stroke as Cornell forged steadily, surely ahead.

At two miles, Cornell had a half-length lead over the fighting, gallant Tech boatload that refused to admit it was licked. It was three-quarters of a length at the two and one-half mark, where Syracuse for the first time began to make itself apparent as a real contender. As M. I. T. dropped back slowly, Syracuse came on with a rush and Cornell had to spurt to hold an advantage of a length as they swept under the high railroad bridge, entering the decisive last mile. The Orange, however, had shot its bolt in a sensational effort to catch the Ithacans and Cornell went on to widen its margin steadily in the last triumphant mile. In the last mile alone, Cornell doubled its lead with a spurt that had the rest of the fleet distanced, with many of them also waterlogged and on the verge of swamping.

Navy Only Boat To Swamp.

Navy's unfortunate outfit was the only one actually to swamp, thereby experiencing the fate that befell four of the nine entries a year ago, but several of the others were on the verge of going down.

Cornell's time for the four miles, 21 minutes and 41 seconds, was more than three minutes behind the record set by California in winning the 1928 race.

It was Cornell's fourteenth victory in the varsity race since 1895, although the first for the Ithacans since they whipped the famous Stanford crew in 1915.

In the freshman race Syracuse came with a great rush in the last mile to win for the second straight year, again reversing the decision over Cornell, victor over the Orange on Lake Cayuga earlier in the season. The Orange yearlings rowed Columbia into subjection and then fought off Cornell's closing challenge to win by two lengths from the Ithacans and by three lengths from Columbia, which finished third.

In the junior varsity race Washington's favorites got the jump and led for the first half, but quickly yielded to Cornell's smashing boatload, which went on to win as it pleased.

Seeded Players Advance In Army Net Tournament

LED by the defending champion, Maj. R. C. Van Vliet, jr., of this city, the seeded players paraded through the first round of singles yesterday in the annual Army tennis championship tournament at Columbia Country Club.

The favored stars found the heat more of an obstacle than their opponents, for, although none was extended beyond two sets, all were visibly affected by the burning rays of Old Sol, who was enjoying a field day.

Maj Van Vliet, winner of the singles title three times within the last four years, the last two in succession, displayed a clever game to defeat Lieut. J. S. Moran, of the Philippine Islands, 6—1, 6—1.

Moran Lacks Control.

Moran, a hard hitter, lacked control, and the champion was the recipient of many points on errors, but Van Vliet often scored on placements and was easily the better player.

Following are the point scores of the Van Vliet-Moran match:

First Set.

Van Vliet	4	6	4	4	4	2	4	—28	—6
Moran	1	4	0	2	1	4	2	—14	—1

Second Set.

Van Vliet	4	4	2	4	6	4	9	—33	—6
Moran	1	1	4	2	4	2	7	—21	—1

Maj. Van Vliet was seeded No. 1, heading the list, followed in order by Lieut. J. W. Straham, New York City; Lieut. S. K. Robinson, Washington; Lieut. D. D. Hedekin, Fort Benning, Ga.; Maj. T. D. Finley, West Point; Maj. J. H. Hilis, Washington, and Maj. R. Garcia, Philippine Islands.

Lieut. Straham, runner-up to Maj. Van Vliet in 1929, drew a first-round bye, while Maj. Finley, with whom Maj. Van Vliet won the 1929 doubles championship, won by default from Maj. W. E. Shedd, Washington.

Lewis Advances To 2d Round.

The youngest player in the tournament appeared in the person of Millard Lewis, a Washingtonian and a graduate of Western High School, who received his commission from West Point early this month. Lewis advanced to the second round by defeating Capt. H. W. Rowan, Washington 6—3, 6—4. He will meet Maj. Van Vliet this morning at 10 o'clock in the second round.

The doubles division will be opened today.

CROWDER TO FACE DETROIT TODAY

pitcher now performing with the Hagerstown Club. The latter pitched a three-hit game against the Black Sox in Baltimore Sunday and gave evidence of having an exceptionally good arm, although he is quite green. He is 22 years old.

Fitzgerald, who has played with the Takoma Tigers, which sent Alvin Powell to the Nats, and also with Hagerstown, is the star doorway guardian of the Washington College team and has not yet completed his college career.

Pitcher Waite Hoyt, obtained, along with Mark Koenig, from the Yankees in the deal which sent Outfielder Harry Rice and Pitcher Owen Carroll to New York, is not likely to help the Tigers until he works off about 10 pounds. He looked like the fat man of the circus side-show when working out before yesterday's game.

As a matter of precaution, Manager Walter Johnson had his injured left wrist X-rayed yesterday morning. The Nat leader is not even wearing a bandage over his injury, received when Manush "low-bridged" him in batting practice before Wednesday's game, but had the photograph taken just to make sure that the bone is not chipped. He expects to get a report on the X-ray picture this morning.

Martin Back On Job.

Trainer Mike Martin was back on the job yesterday after a two-day lay-off due to illness. "Sir Mique" is popular with the Nats and was given a warm welcome upon his return to business.

Art Shires appeared none the worse yesterday from the blow in the head which he received when he ran into Shortstop Goldman's peg while the Cleveland shortstop was trying to complete a double-play in the sixth frame of Wednesday's game. The blow apparently started Shires in bad habits again, though, for he has gone back to his "double-sized" cud of tobacco, and looked like he had a broken jaw in fielding practice yesterday.

Gene Desautels, Holy Cross catcher, who recently joined the Tigers, likely will work behind the plate for them today. In his first week as a pro, he already has worked in three games and has made quite an impression upon Pilot Harris.

STOCK PRICES RALLY IN LISTLESS MARKET

Active Issues Gain 1 to 5 as Volatile Shares Rise 6 to 20 Points.

MONEY RATES DECLINE

New York, June 26 (A.P.).—The bears muffled their drums and spiked their big guns today, beating an orderly retreat that enabled the stock market to close on a rally for the second successive day, thereby establishing a record for the current month. Sales, however, were the smallest since June 13, totaling only 2,272,080 shares.

With the aid of short covering, which followed one attempt to depress prices, the more active shares finished 1 to 5 points higher in the dull market, while some of the volatile issues advanced 6 to 20 points. Commodities improved substantially, but the bond market continued dull.

Wall street was rather wary of the rise in stocks, for the record of this bear market to date shows that rallies have been exceedingly short-lived. Nevertheless, there was a growing opinion that if the market had not reached an oversold condition, it was reaching such a status, and this view seemed to be substantiated in the readiness of the shorts to cover. The raids on the pivotal stocks today were briefer and not so vicious, and although there was no wild scramble to protect short profits, many traders appeared satisfied to ease out gradually.

Price Index Up 3.6 Points.

The composite price of 90 stocks revealed a gain of 3.6 points which compared with a rise of 1.2 points yesterday. It was the first time since late in May that the general index had gained ground two days in a row.

Money went begging, after renewing at 2 per cent, the plentitude of funds forced the official call loan rate down to 1½ per cent, the lowest since August 1, 1917.

In general, sentiment was relieved by the relaxation of the pressure against the speculative commodities. Wheat got 3 to 4 cents a bushel higher, although the gains at the close were reduced to 2⅜ to 3½. Bullish Canadian crop news, and announcement that the Grain Stabilization Corporation would not dispose of its holdings figured in the improvement in this staple. Corn rallied less vigorously and was up ½ to ⅞ of a cent net. Cotton finished about $1.50 to $2 a bale higher.

The striking news of the day came after the close of the markets. It was the $371,000,000 drop in brokers' loans, one of the largest on record and the largest since the Autumn panic, bringing the decline for the past three weeks to $685,000,000 and the total of loans outstanding to $3,416,000,000 against $4,342,000,000 a year ago.

Large Decrease Surprises.

During the period covered by the loan report the volume of trading had not been particularly heavy, although the interval included the 6,400,000-share turnover on June 18. In view of this, the size of the decrease was a surprise to the financial community which, in view of the known volume of short selling, had not realized fully the extent to which weakly margined accounts had been closed out.

Aside from a flurry of selling soon after the opening the course of stocks was upward throughout the day. The announcement of the split-up and extra dividend in American Tobacco was favorably construed, for it had been some time since the market had had such a piece of news on a leading stock. Anaconda's dividend reduction had been expected; some quarters, in fact, had been prepared for a larger cut.

United States Steel got 1 point below yesterday's close in the early selling, but thereafter sold 6 points above the Wednesday low and finished a point net higher. American Can, American Telephone, General Electric, Atchison, New York Central, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Westinghouse Electric, General Electric and Union Pacific, among others, were up 1 to 4. American Tobacco gained 14 points, Ingersoll Rand 2, Eastman Kodak 10, Diamond Match 2 and Allied Chemical 8.

Foreign exchanges were irregular. The Spanish peseta again went into new low ground.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, June 26 (A.P.).—Cotton was higher today in response to relatively steady Liverpool cable reports of a better tone in grain and stocks and continued mild temperatures in the South, which seemed to be causing some uneasiness, particularly in central belt sections where rain is supposed to be needed.

July sold up to 13.70, or 28 points net higher, and closed at 13.70, while the new October advanced to 13.13 and closed at 13.09. The general market closed steady at net advances of 33 to 39 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 11 to 14 points in response to the firmer showing of Liverpool. The circulation of additional July notices, estimated at about 14,400 bales, brought out some further liquidation of July, but the offerings were light and appeared to be readily absorbed by the trade on shorts. The same interests credited with stopping notices yesterday, were believed to be stopping them again today, and the development of a steadier tone in the July position seemed to have a favorable influence on later deliveries.

The buying increased after the publication of the detailed weather reports showing a continuance of very high temperatures in the South, and the firmness of the wheat market no doubt encouraged the demand. The old October sold up to 13.42 and the new December to 13.30, making net gains of about 34 to 41 points on the general list, and the close was within 4 or 5 points of the best on the more active new-crop positions. July closed at a premium of 61 points over the new October, compared with 60 points at the close of the previous day.

A feeling that the liquidation of the scattering long interest in July had been pretty well completed was regarded by local brokers as one of the factors in the steadier ruling of the market, while the better ruling of wheat and stocks were contributing influences. The detailed weather reports showed maximum temperatures of 100 degrees or above at 135 stations scattered over the belt outside the Carolinas.

Liverpool cable reported continental and Bombay buying, with a scarcity of contracts in that market. Port receipts today, 2,415. United States port stocks, 1,689,570. Exports, 2,891, making 6,629,063 so far this season.

CONVERTIBLES HEAD RECOVERY IN BONDS

Advances, Except in Stock Option Section, Prove Rather Slight.

FOREIGN ISSUES STEADY

New York, June 26 (A.P.).—An improved tone was apparent in the bond market today and gains exceeded losses for the first time in several days. A wide list of corporation issues, both liens and convertibles, appreciated. Most of the rally came in the late trading.

There was a marked absence of distress selling, and although advances were not large, except among convertibles in which a definite rally was sustained, the market regained its stability, and rising tendencies were the rule. An upturn in the share market and the one-half per cent reduction in the call money rate, now at the lowest point since 1917, contributed to the recovery.

United States Governments did not respond to the reduction in loaning rates and prices ruled steady, with most of the activity in Liberty fourth 4¼s. Foreign issues were steady.

American Telephone Drops.

Improved prices were the rule among convertible issues. The principal exception was American Telephone 4½s, which dropped 2 points. International Telephone 4½s, which were depressed yesterday to the lowest point of the year, rebounded 2⅞ points. Atchison 4½s gained 1½; Philadelphia Reading 6s moved up nearly 3 points. Several railroad issues made smaller gains. Amusement convertibles were quiet and steady.

Buying of railroad bonds increased but lacked enthusiasm and prices ruled steady to firm. Atchison general 4s ruled unchanged. Baltimore & Ohio issues ruled slightly higher. St. Paul 5s gained ⅝ of a point. Missouri Pacific 4s, Nickel Plate 5½s, and Pennsylvania 4½s were firm. Southern Railway 6s rose 1¾ points. Erie issues continued weak and Denver, Rio Grande & Western 5s touched a new low.

Vertienties Sugar Slumps.

Among the industrials, Armour & Co. 5½s moved up 1 point from its low of the year. Ajax Rubber 8s gained 2¼ points. Vertienties Sugar 7s touched a new low with a 1-point loss for the third successive day. Philadelphia Co. 5s were firm and close to the high price of the year.

Kreuger & Toll warrant 5s was one of the most active issues among the foreign group. The bond was heavily accumulated and gained nearly a point. Mexican issues rose as bankers discussed liquidation of defaulted issues. The German 5½s held at 90 on a moderate turnover.

The Memphis Natural Gas Co. plans to redeem its outstanding first mortgage 6 per cent gold bonds, amounting to $6,153,500, dated August 1, 1928, and August 1, 1943, at the principal amount and accrued interest, plus a premium of 3 per cent of the principal amount of the bonds.

ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

In making inquiries address Charles W. Storm, financial department of The Washington Post, and inclose a self-addressed stamped envelope for reply.

Rayborn, Fidelity & Phoenix.

B. J. S.—I wish you would give me some information and an opinion on Rayborn and Fidelity & Phoenix Fire Insurance.

Answer—Fidelity-Phoenix Fire Insurance Co. of New York, formed in 1910, has an excellent record of dividends paid, beginning with 1911 up to the present time. Recently the dividend on the new stock, which followed the 2½ for 1 split-up in 1928, was increased from $2 to $2.60 per share annually. Premiums received by company have shown an upward trend since 1921, reaching the record amount of $21,945,331 in 1929. Company is in strong financial condition. Considering these facts, stock appears quite attractive from an investment viewpoint. Have no record of a company bearing name of Rayborn, consequently impossible to supply information or an opinion thereon. Have you given the correct title?

Airway Electric Appliance.

O. L. T.—I am thinking of buying Airway Electric Appliance stock at current prices. What is your opinion of it?

Answer—First quarter earnings dropped 31 per cent when compared with the same 1929 period, but larger production and aggressive sales polices may bring profits for the year up to those of 1929, when $3.86 per share of common was reported, against $3.29 in 1928. First quarter income this year was equivalent to 60 cents, as against 96 cents. Sound earnings fall below those of 1929, it would be the first decline since the company was organized. At prevailing prices, the yield is approximately 12 per cent. The company is in fairly strong condition, with current assets four times current liabilities. A large part of current assets, however, are "accounts receivable," an unusually large proportion to make things entirely satisfactory. The stock is a speculative investment, having some appeal.

Norfolk & Western.

J. J. W.—How is Norfolk & Western regarded from an investment standpoint?

Answer—It is considered a high-grade investment issue suitable for the long term. Earnings on the common are running at a rate of $28 a share, while the stock is selling for eight times indicated 1930 earnings. The yield based on the $10 dividend, and the current price, is about 4½ per cent. Norfolk is regarded as being a bargain among the investment rails. Control of Norfolk & Western, held by the Pennsylvania, is not regarded as necessary for maintenance of traffic and earnings and should the latter be ordered to divest itself of its stock investment, it should have no effect on the Norfolk & Western minority shareholders. Income last year equaled $29.06 on the common. Net working capital is $3,680,000, and cash on hand $5,630,279 against $7,331,406.

Bangor & Aroostook.

H. T. F.—What are the earnings of Bangor & Aroostook; also what is the selling price of the stock to earnings?

Answer—The stock, at current prices is selling for 6½ times earnings and yields about 5 per cent. With the majority of other roads reporting traffic and earnings declines, Bangor is an outstanding exception, current profits running at a rate of $11 per share of common stock, while traffic is 30 per cent ahead of this time last year.

Power plant and pulp mill construction accounts for the increased traffic, which is likely to continue during the summer. Dividends of $3.50 annually are paid, and an increase is regarded as a reasonable probability. As of December 31, the ratio of current assets to current liabilities was four to one, net working capital totaling $3,379,300. The stock appears attractive.

Worthington Pump.

B. H. R.—I haye held Worthington Pump common during the break. Have you any recent information regarding the stock?

Answer — Worthington is understood to have closed a big contract with the Gulf Oil Corporation. The common pays nothing, but dividends on both classes of preferred were resumed last year. Accumulations have been reduced substantially, amounting to $7 on the preferred A and $6 on the preferred B. There is no funded debt. Earnings for 1929 equaled $15.89 per share on the preferred and $11.96 on the common, as against nothing earned on the latter the year previous. As of last December, Worthington was in a strong position. Current assets were $17,311,700, which included $1,224,800 cash; $6,007,100 securities and call loans, and $3,490,800 receivables. Current assets were $1,561,900, leaving net working capital $15,749,800. The book value of the common stock, after allowing for the preferred and the accumulated dividends thereon, was $84.40 per share. The common must be considered in the light of a speculation.

American Machine & Foundry.

K. L.—Kindly give me an opinion of American Machine & Foundry.

Answer—Earnings are running well ahead of those of the 1929 volume. In that year income was equivalent to $12.10 on the 200,000 outstanding common shares. The capital structure is undergoing a change by retirement of the preferred on August 1 and the splitting up of the common 5 for 1. While no announcement has been made yet as to the dividend on the split-up stock, it is thought likely that it will be in excess of the $7 rate on the present stock. Larger earnings are expected as a result of more profitable cigar machine rentals. Worthington will soon market its new cigarette machines and is fast developing its baking machine line. At present the yield ok the stock is about 3½ per cent.

Considering that the company has a virtual monopoly in supplying automatic cigar and cigarette machines, in addition to machines to other industries; also the steady rise in earnings, the stock may be considered attractive for long-term holding. At the end of 1929 net working capital stood at $5,633,600. Cash and marketable securities were six times current liabilities, while inventories constituted 28 per cent of current assets.

Loose-Wiles Biscuit.

V. H.—I am thinking of investing in Loose-Wiles Biscuit. Can you tell me something about the company?

Answer—An extra of 10 cents per common share was paid May 1 last and another will be paid August 1. Dividends are $2.60 on the common annually. While no interim earnings statements are made public, payment of the extra dividends would indicate that business is in normal state, despite the general depression, and that the steadily rising earnings of the past nine years are likely to continue. With Loose-Wiles turning out biscuits and fancy crackers, the stock may be regarded as being in the so-called depression-proof group. Funded debt amounts to $981,000.

Last year $4.88 a share was earned on the common after preferred dividends, as against $4.07 for 1928. Current assets last December amounted to $9,059,000, including $1,451,400 in cash, and $795,700 marketable securities. Current liabilities were $2,815,300, indicating net working capital in excess of $6,000,000. Loose-Wiles may be described as possessing some merit.

Pilot Radio.

R. E.—Some time ago you regarded Pilot Radio in a rather favorable light. How is the business running? I notice that the dividend for the next quarter has not been declared.

Answer—The vice president of Pilot Radio informs the writer that the dividend has been passed temporarily in view of the general move of corporations of either passing or reducing dividends to conserve cash. In the case of Pilot, cash was conserved for expansion and new acquisitions, and the dividend will probably be resumed, according to this official, when the time is ripe. The cash position is double current liabilities. Sales in April increased nearly 55 per cent over April, 1928, and a statement issued by President Ginsberg, of Pilot, says "directors feel that earnings for 1930 should show an increase over 1929 earnings."

Profits last year were equal to $2 a share on the 200,000 class A shares. Pilot has just segregated its business, the tube manufacturing end being transferred to the Allan Co. for 219,800 shares of the latter stock. Each stockholder in Pilot Radio on July 15 is entitled to receive one share of Allan Co. stock for each share of Pilot held. The Allan Co. stock is expected to be listed on the New York Curb.

NEWS OF LATEST HAPPENINGS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

ARLINGTON GROUP WILL AID HEDRICK

Committee to Investigate Charges Brought by Women Voters.

MEETING IS SCHEDULED

ARLINGTON COUNTY.
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Perfecting its organization, the self-organized group of women members of the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County at its meeting in Clarendon last night elected Mrs. Mary Morris Lockwood as chairman. It pledged itself to use all its influence in supporting Supervisor B. M. Hedrick, who has been cited to appear in the Circuit Court of Arlington County, Tuesday, July 8, to show cause why he should not be removed from office for malfeasance. The citation is a result of the petition filed with the circuit court last week in connection with the installation of water and sewer lines in the Waycroft subdivision, of which he is a stockholder and a director.

Mrs. Lockwood announces there will be a special meeting held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the rooms of the Arlington District Library Association, at which time the letter which will be presented to the county board of supervisors at its meeting Monday, will be read and signed by the group.

While the draft of the letter had not been completed last night, Mrs. Lockwood stated that the letter will express complete confidence in the business ability and ethics of the board in handling the affairs of the county.

Mrs. Lockwood further stated that she is in receipt of a number of letters from other organizations and individual women of the county who are in full sympathy of the movement, which has been taken in the interest of Supervisor Hedrick.

"While this committee has been formed to fight for Mr. Hedrick and while we are members of the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County, we do not propose to break away from the organization, but will fight the matter out within the organization," Mrs. Lockwood said.

The committee will question whether the president and other officers had the right to take the drastic step of charging Mr. Hedrick with malfeasance as a result of the manner in which sewerage and water lines were installed in the Waycroft subdivision without calling a special meeting of the entire membership for their approval of the action.

Those attending the meeting were Mrs. Mary Morris Lockwood, chairman; Mrs. John G. Dudley, Mrs. Lolo B. Sanderson, Mrs. Louis A. MacMahon, Mrs. C. W. Harris, Mrs. W. B. Mabry, Mrs. John Agnew, Mrs. Ernest Morsell and Mrs. H. G. Gibson.

While no action was taken by the association, there was a lengthy discursion on the subject of a change in the county form of government, a matter which is now in the hands of a special committee from the Arlington County Civic Federation which, it was pointed out, is making an exhaustive study into the question with the hope of making its recommendations to the federation at the September meeting.

It was pointed out by Mr. Anderson that one of the features of the convention was the fact that it was voted to sponsor the movement of the organization of "the Camp Fire Girls," which is today a nationally known organization. It was stated that a representative of the organization will visit the club during the coming month and point out some of the work this organization is doing throughout the country. It was further stated by Mr. Cohen that sponsoring of this organization will in no way have any effect on any of the objectives that the local club may adopt during the year.

BANK OFFICIAL SEES PROSPERITY BY FALL

John G. Lonsdale Gives Talk at Annual Convention of Virginia Organization.

VOICES FAITH IN FUTURE

Hot Springs, Va., June 26 (A.P.).—Expressing a belief that the recent depression in the Nation's business is almost over, John G. Lonsdale, St. Louis, president of the American Bankers Association, today predicted returned prosperity by early fall.

He was speaking before the annual convention of the Virginia Bankers Association, and marked September as the month for renewed business activity.

"I am inclined to think that the storm of the past few months has about passed," he told the State bankers. "Now and then there is still a rumble of thunder, but the clouds are breaking away and the sun is already peeping through the spots. By autumn, the business barometer should indicate calm, fair weather ahead."

Denies Individual's Submergence.

Mr. Lonsdale compared the analysis of modern business made by the American Bankers Association to the microscopic study of plant and animal life carried on by scientists. It has eliminated guesswork and, produced success, he said.

"Economic research and analysis serve as the microscope through which we are enabled to see basic factors more clearly and thus determine the causes of success and failure," he said. "Only recently have we begun to realize the full value of research and analysis and apply them in such a way as to eliminate the guesswork that was characteristic of industry a few years ago."

Mr. Lonsdale denied that business complexities have submerged the worth of the individual and eliminated chances for leadership.

"While the individual may not attract such attention as he did in the days of old when institutions were conducted on a smaller scale," he said, "he nevertheless is to be found in any large corporation, dominating the situation, giving orders here, cooperating there and shouldering the responsibility of keeping a large band of lieutenants, captains and privates working in unison and moving forward under the banner of progress.

Praises Smaller Banker.

"Even in the gigantic mergers that have taken place within the last two years there remains more than ever the necessity for a leader, an aggressive personality whose duty it is to see that basic principles are not forgotten, that the rights and privileges of the individual workers and the customers they serve are as well provided for as in the smaller business units."

"With banking conditions of today in a state of great uncertainty, there never was a time when analysis and deep thinking were more needed in both country and city. The smaller banker, upon whom has fallen many difficult burdens, is placed at a distinct disadvantage in the making of analaysis, and city correspondent banks and bankers association should do all in their power to assist him.

"To the smaller banker I extend full sympathy and praise, for he has been the mainstay of agriculture at a time when it has suffered a serious national decline. It has been his responsibility, too, to bear many of the tribulations that follow in the wake of innovations affecting the serenity of community life.

Predicts Greater Progress.

"Although various local conditions, such as droughts, floods and crop failures, have brought many troubles to country bankers, we must look beyond these seasonal disturbances for the underlying cause of difficulties. Perhaps the chief explanation lies in our change of social and economic life; the one-time independent community has now, through the medium of better transportation and communication, become in effect a part of the large city, and much of the financing that once came to the smaller banker now seeks support in the larger metropolis.

"Let me repeat that I have boundless faith in the future of American business and American banking. With such vast undeveloped resources, such unlimited possibilities in creative fields, we have only begun to unfold the vision that will be the heritage of coming generations. What the past half century has witnessed will in no wise compare with progress 50 years hence. A momentary lull in industry, such as we recently have had, gives us added experience and wisdom, we hope, to face the battles of the future."

Attorneys Praise Maryland Courts

Expediency of Disposition of Cases Is Lauded by Two Capital Men.

Baltimore, June 26 (A.P.).—Praise for Maryland judicial procedure was given today by two Washington attorneys, members of a committee studying revision of court procedure and rules while on a visit here.

They are Robert Maurer and Walter J. Casey, members of the District Bar Association committee and a committee of the Supreme Court of the District on law revision.

Civil suits in District courts, they said, take two to two and a half years before being brought to trial compared with an average of four to six months in Maryland. Criminal cases are disposed of quicker in Maryland than in most other States, they said.

MONTGOMERY PARTY NAMING CANDIDATES

Antiorganization Faction of Democrats to Announce List of Choices Today.

SEEKS SHAW OPPONENT

Members of the antiorganization faction of the Democratic party in Montgomery County, Md., today will announce their list of candidates for nomination at the Democratic primaries and the platform upon which these candidates will stand.

It is understood that the antis are having difficulty in filling their slate, the organiation candidates being considered too powerful for any wary politician to oppose. Especially are they having difficulty in securing a candidate for the post of county commissioner from the Silver Spring area, which is now held by Lacy Shaw, vice president of the Board of County Commissioners, who is conceded one of the most popular members of the board. So far the antiorganization forces have been unable to find any one to consent to oppose Commissioner Shaw, who is the organization candidate for reelection.

The following is the slate as so far prepared by the antiorganization forces:

For State senator, Dr. Eugene Jones of Kensington, incumbent, who has bolted the organization faction; for clerk of the circuit court, William H. Warfield, of Damascus; for register of wills, Richard T. White, of Boyd; for county commissioners, Nicholas R. Griffith, Olney, First Election District; Arthur V. Watkins, Cedar Grove, Second; W. Pierce Hunter, Beallsville, Third; J. Vinson Peter, Rockville, Fourth; the Fifth is the district now administered by Commissioner Shaw and for which no candidate has been found; Otho C. Trundle, Gaithersburg, Sixth, and Eugene H. McLachlen, Chevy Chase, Seventh.

For members of the House of Delegates: E. Barrett Prettyman, of Chevy Chase, who is president of the publishing company which publishes the Montgomery Independent, the newspaper which has been attacking the county government and which recently was involved in grand jury proceedings which resulted in nolle prosequis on technicalities, and C. Clyde Shade, Takoma Park, with three others to be selected.

For judges of the orphans court: William A. Bogley, Laytonsville; Frank Willson, Alta Vista, and Genoa King, Damascus, and for county treasurer, John T. Culver, Forest Glen, who appears to be the strongest man on the ticket.

William L. Aud, of Poolesville, is expected to be the antiorganization candidate for sheriff. Mr. Aud led the anti ticket in the 1926 elections, although he was defeated for the Democratic nomination by the incumbent, Joseph B. Pyles, of Rockville. Sheriff Pyles will not be a candidate for reelection, as the county law prohibits more than one term. John E. Oxley, of Poolesville, is the anti candidate for State's attorney.

ROCKVILLE CITIZENS FEAR PLANE CRASH

"Airport Menace" Cited in Protest Filed After Recent Accident.

JULY 4 FETE IS PLANNED

Residents of the Rockville pike are up in arms concerning the "airship menace" to their neighborhood. Alarmed by the crash of a training ship at Halpine Monday night they have adopted resolutions deploring the location of an airport at that point and asking relief.

The Rockville Pike Citizens Association, at a meeting in the Harper Country Clubhouse adopted a resolution in which they point out that they are "being constantly annoyed and even endangered by the low flying of airplanes" and are "in continually disturbing fear that their lives and property may be damaged by the failing of such planes on account of defective mechanism or incompetent management."

They point out that "under the management of an inexperienced operator, such an airplane did fall within the last few days and within 20 feet of a house, causing serious damage, with several people only miraculously escaping bodily injury."

The secretary of the association, Burton T. Doyle, was directed to communicate with the Secretary of Commerce, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, the Maryland Aviation Commission and the Board of County Commissioners of Montgomery County, requesting all of them to lend their good offices to the end "that we may be relieved if possible from this intolerable condition and that he inquire especially of the Maryland Aviation Commission whether or not the Congressional Airport possesses a license in accordance with the provisions of the Maryland law."

The citizens also adopted a resolution in which they protested strenuously against rezoning of property at the junction of the Rockville pike and the Old Georgetown pike from residential to commercial. The resolution declares that certain members of the association had at the cost of large sums of money caused removal of three gas stations from the pike and that it is the object of the association to "preserve the beauty and dignity of this pike and prevent it from being lined with gas plants and other commercial enterprises." The secretary was directed to send copies of the resolution to the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

They also urged that the small triangle at the junction of the two roads be purchased as a park to eliminate the present sharp turn at that point.

Precinct leaders of the Republican party in Montgomery County will meet this afternoon at the Montgomery Country Club to make plans for the coming State and county election campaign.

The principal business to come before the group is selection of a convention date at which candidates for county officers will be named.

Final arrangements have been completed for the annual carnival of the Kensington Volunteer Fire Department which will be held July 4 and 5 at Forest Glen road and St. Paul street, Kensington.

A silver loving cup to be presented to the company making the best appearance in the parade has been offered by The Washington Post. The parade will form on Connecticut avenue and will be reviewed by prominent fire officials of Washington and Maryland in front of the National Guard Armory.

A hook-up test will be held in which 31 visiting companies will compete for a silver loving cup, followed by a rescue squad contest. The auxiliaries also will be given a chance when the women's teams compete in a hook-up contest for which a silver loving cup will be awarded. The Kensington women's team won the contest last year and other teams are expected to give them a strong argument this year.

Members of the committee in charge are: Alfred L. Geiger, chairman; M. D. Curran, H. R. Magruder, R. Burdette, J. P. Rainey, Eugene Stubbs and Clay Fletcher.

Prowler Terrifies Lynchburg Homes

Police Chief Admits Keeping News of Intruder From Police.

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., June 26.—Lynchburg has another prowler, it was revealed today when Mrs. Claude Richardson, 1410 Tenth street, reported that she was aroused at 2 a. m. by a man sitting at the foot of her bed. When she awoke he had hold of her feet. She flashed on an electric light and screamed. This awakened her husband, who was sleeping in the same room. The man escaped through a rear window, through which he had entered.

A few minutes later Mrs. S. J. Maloney, 707 Floyd street, a few block away notified police that a man had attempted to force a lower-story window of her home. She said this attempt was unsuccessful and then admitted that early Tuesday morning an intruder went into the bedroom of a young woman boarder, who woke to find him seated at the foot of her bed. In neither instance were occupants able to see enough of the man to give a description of him.

Chief of Police Smith admitted, after these reports were made to the local newspapers, that he knew of them, but stated that he had suppressed the information. He denied that there had been other similar complaints. A year ago, after a long series of experiences of this nature, a Negro was killed as he was fleeting from the home of a white family.

Through his attorney Brenner states that Baranowski operates a soft-drink place on the North Point road and that on May 27 Baranowski offered him a drink of whisky.

"Good luck and good health," said Brenner as he tossed off the drink. A few minutes later, the plaintiff alleges, he was unconscious, suffered severe pains and spent a large sum of money regaining his health.

W. Herfurth, for a company not named in the bid. These bids will be taken under consideration and acted upon later.

The bid of the public service company offered a lump sum of $500 for the franchise, which covers publication and other necessary expenses, and also offered a much lower rate than at present obtains for the street lighting. Under the new franchise which, if granted to the Virginia Public Service Co., would have but 24 years to run, the real property and equipment of the company would be assessed by the State corporation commission each year, this assessment to form the basis for taxation, and in addition the city will levy a tax of one-half of 1 per cent of the company's gross revenue for the privilege of using the streets and alleys for its poles and other equipment. The rates to be charged the general public for current are fixed by the State corporation commission, and are not affected by the franchise in any way.

The present franchise provides that the company extends free service to fire engine houses, office of the clerk of the corporation court, corporation courtroom and police courtroom and a 50 per cent charge to the Alexandria Hospital, all churches of the city, city schools and offices in the city hall. No mention of this provision is made in the bids for the new franchise.

Attorney John Barton Phillips appeared, representing the Sun Lumber Co., to ask that the Government be asked to make certain alterations in its plans for the Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard, in the construction of a bridge at Washington and South streets. It appears that the present plans contemplate building through the property of the Sun Lumber Co., and the boulevard will run so that the company will not have free access to both sections of its property. The change asked for would be in the nature of an underpass, or an alteration of the plans so that an underpass could be constructed by the company.
